Liner Manhattan Runs Aground Off Florida With 650 on Board

Coast Guard Rushes Aid as Heavy Sea Pounds Cruise Craft

By the Associated Press

West Palm Beach, Fla., Jan. 12.—The liner Manhattan, of the United States Lines, bound from New York to California with 200 cruise passengers, went aground off Lake Worth Inlet early tonight.

The ship, which carried a crew of 450, was reported in no immediate danger.

Two Coast Guard cutters—the Mojave, from Miami, and the Vigilante, from Fort Pierce—were ordered to the scene, five miles north of here.

Coast Guardsmen Visit Ship

[The Coast Guard base at Fort Lauderdale said all cutters along the South Atlantic coast had been ordered to the assistance of the liner, the United Press reported.]

In New York, line officials announced that Capt. G. V. Richardson had wirelessed that the ship was in no danger and that Coast Guard cutters were expected to "lend a hand in getting off early in the morning."

Earl Wallace, boatswain in charge of the Coast Guard's Peanut Island Station, and five guardsmen went out to the vessel in a small boat to investigate. Wallace said the master told him the ship just needed to be pulled off.

The Mojave and the Vigilante were expected to reach the scene in about three hours.

Pounded by 8-Foot Waves

Newspapermen aboard a small launch that went to the scene reported waves eight feet high were trailing well above the American flag painted on the side of the ship. One wave, they said, washed over the deck.

The Manhattan was lying parallel to the shore, with the stern slightly closer in. She was less than half a mile from the beach.

'X' indicates where the liner Manhattan was aground

There was activity ashore, but whether Coast Guardsmen were planning to approach from there could not be told. The Guardsmen rigged up lights for us if needed.

The tide was receding and would not be full again until morning.

There was no immediate explanation of why the big craft was so close in shore, but shopping circles pointed out that most southbound vessels came as close in as possible to avoid bucking the swift Gulf Stream.

Observers at Lake Worth said the weather was good, except for a heavy ground swell, and there were indications that if the Manhattan had merely struck a bar—as was indicated—the next tide would free her.

The Manhattan is 668 feet long and has a gross tonnage of over 24,389 tons.

Before entering the cruise service, the Manhattan served the United States Government in transporting stranded Americans from the European war zone.

Traffic 'Clinic' Called as Cars Maim 13 More

Brown Orders All Police Commanders To Conference Today

A conference of all commanding officers and inspectors to consider means of improving the Police Department's accident-prevention and traffic-enforcement program has been called for today by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, it was learned last night as public and official reaction developed to a citizen suggestion for a voluntary organization of residents to report traffic violators.

Traffic accidents brought injury to 13 persons yesterday. With total traffic deaths for the new year at eight, more than double the toll for the same period in 1940, a victim of a Saturday night crash which was fatal to his companion remained in a critical condition at Emergency Hospital.

Maj. Brown's conference will be in the nature of a traffic-accident clinic to study surveys of accident causes and recommendations for tightening up the department's prevention and enforcement system made by Inspector Arthur E. Miller, head of the accident prevention unit.

Miller, graduate of Northwestern University's Traffic Institute, has made a long and detailed study of traffic accidents in the District. His major recommendation to the conference, he said last night, will be to ask centralization of all motorcycle officers in the city under a single command at police headquarters.

A large portion of the department's motorcycle detail is now assigned to the various precincts, Miller observed. Because of sicknesses, days off and assignment to special duty, Miller pointed out, many precincts with high accident rates are frequently without motorcycle men.

With the men under a unified command, he explained, it will be possible to assign them to streets where the Accident Prevention Unit's studies have shown need for regular patrol. The plan would have the added advantage of uniform traffic patrol policy and one-man responsibility for direction of motorcycle police.

Inspector Miller also believes, he said, that police in scout cars and

British Cruiser Sunk in Battle, Rome Asserts

Two Destroyers Hit by Shellfire, Italians Claim

By Michael Chinigo
International News Service Staff Writer

Rome, Jan. 12.—A running naval battle, in which a British cruiser was sunk by two torpedoes and two British destroyers were damaged with shellfire while an Italian torpedoboat went to the bottom, was announced tonight, together with a new German aerial success against Britain's Mediterranean fleet.

Revealing the dramatic Italo-British sea engagement, the Italian high command declared also that German Stuka fliers, "following up their brilliant actions" of Friday, executed a series of attacks on two "strong" British naval formations in the Mediterranean and "beyond doubt" scored a heavy bomb hit on a cruiser.

(The German high command in Berlin claimed a greater success than indicated in the Italian communique. The Germans said "several other warships," in addition to the cruiser, "received heavy bomb hits.")

The Italian military bulletin identified the cruiser, said to have been damaged under the Nazi dive-bombing assault, as belonging to the 9,000-ton Birmingham class. The attack was staged Saturday, about 24 hours after Friday's series of combined Italo-German dive-bombing and torpedo-plane onslaughts that were said to have crippled at least six British warships, including aircraft carriers.

As the joint Italo-German aeronaval offensive to smash the British Mediterranean fleet raged into full stride, the Rome communique described the latest sea battle as follows:

"At dawn on January 10 an Italian torpedo boat detachment on patrol in the channel of Sicily (a 90-mile wide stretch of water between the island of Sicily and Tunisia) sighted a strong enemy naval formation, consisting of numerous surface craft units.

"Two of our torpedo boats resolutely attacked the center of this formation, registering two torpedo hits on a cruiser which subsequently was observed in a sinking condition.

"A violent battle ensued between enemy destroyers and our torpedo

Seaplane Dives Into Potomac; Pilot Escapes With Cut Chin

A seaplane plunged from an altitude of 300 feet into the Potomac River a mile above Key Bridge yesterday, resulting in only a cut chin for the pilot and a wetting for two friends who swam the C. & O. Canal to aid him.

The pilot, Ralph Smith, 24, manager of the Washington Airport Basin Yacht Club, climbed out of the wreckage and was rowed ashore by two fishermen. He was treated at Georgetown Hospital and returned to his houseboat home at the yacht basin.

Smith said he had been "gunning" his plane up and down the river in an effort to take off after stopping near the Virginia shore to adjust the carburetor. Two friends, John Rodier, 24, of Lanham, Md., and Preston Cox, 20, of Burnt Mills, Silver Spring, Md., stood on the Virginia shore and watched Smith finally raise his plane.

"He got off to pretty good elevation and started banking around when the plane went into a spin," Rodier said. It crashed on the Hens and Chickens, an outcropping of rocks near the District shore.

Unable to cross the river, Rodier and Cox drove their car around to the District shore. Taking off their shoes and coats, they plunged into the C. & O. Canal. By the time they had reached the river bank Smith had been brought ashore by the fishermen.

Aboard his houseboat last night Smith was more worried about the fate of his plane than his narrow escape from death. He has held a pilot's license for the past year. His plane was a '38 Piper Cub sport model.

Cry of Wolf Again

Copyright by New York Times

Bern, Switzerland, Jan. 12.—Admitting it might be a case of crying wolf just once too often, well-informed diplomatic quarters were nevertheless inclined to scoff at Balkan reports arriving here tonight announcing that once more Chancellor Hitler has set a "deadline," expiring at noon tomorrow, for Bulgarian permission for German troops to cross that country to go to the aid of Italy in Albania.

Supporting these reports, however, were the following developments:

1. Premier Philoff of Bulgaria, who recently returned from a mysterious sojourn in Germany, declared Bulgaria might yet be brought into the war and warned the people to be ready to defend "their interests."

2. Tass, the official Soviet news agency, announced that whatever German troops may do to or in Bulgaria will be done without the knowledge and consent of the Soviet Union.

3. A high Turkish official declared Turkey will declare war if Nazi troops cross the Rumanian frontier into Bulgaria.

Balkan Bloc Foreseen

Diplomats here foresaw rapid developments in connection with the formation of a so-called Balkan bloc, consisting of Turkey, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria, with eventually Greece joining the combine. The object of such an alliance would be to resist further encroachment of the Axis into that part of the world.

The protocols of such a bloc would settle economic and territorial questions outstanding among the three original powers by the formation of a customs union permitting the free interchange of commerce, the use of each other's transport and port facilities, and access on an equal footing to all the raw materials and agricultural produce of the region.

Currency Union Mentioned

Militarily, the intention is to maintain the status quo and the agreement would be directed against no one in particular unless—stealing a page out of the tripartite military agreement's book—"another party, at present outside the war, should intervene militarily against any power, whether at war or not, in this region." This is held to be directed against possible German intervention in Greece.

There were even enthusiastic references to an extension of this agreement shortly after it has been signed to include a currency union, placing the economic assets of the region at the disposal of all, though more conservative opinion here held this would have to wait until after the war.

Willkie Backs Lend-Lease Bill; Prepares to Fly to London; Arms Loan Fight Opens Today

Opponents Strive To Amend Measure, Seeing Little Hope Of Defeating Passage

Momentous Capitol Hill battling over legislation for "all out" aid to Great Britain opens today with opponents centering their first offensive in the direction of modifying amendments.

Little hope of defeating the legislation was indicated, and main questions appeared to lie in the amount of delay that would result from the onslaughts and which, if any, of proposed modifications might be pressed through in both houses.

The House will be called upon today to end a tangle of controversy over whether the Foreign Affairs Committee or the Military Affairs Committee will handle the measure. Chairman Bloom, of the Foreign Affairs group, succeeded in having it referred to his committee, but the House must vote today on a challenge of that jurisdiction by Chairman May, of the Military Committee.

Hull May Testify

Should Bloom win in the vote he plans to open hearings on the bill tomorrow with Secretary of State Hull probably appearing as first witness. Completion of hearings this week, whether closed or open, is Bloom's goal, in the hope that the Senate may get the bill before the end of the week.

Meanwhile, Chairman George said the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will decide at a meeting Wednesday whether to hold hearings simultaneously with those on the House side, or wait until House action is completed.

In this situation, Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, announced that he will introduce legislation "for the creation of a special Congressional committee to look into all phases of our national defense effort." He asked that it be given $150,000.

Security to Be Asked

Amendments to require reasonable security for weapons supplied to Britain, limiting the time for which the bill's extraordinary powers are granted to President Roosevelt, retention of the present requirement that Army and Navy chiefs certify that equipment turned over to Britain is not essential to our own defense, and elimination of authority for fighting ships of other friendly powers to be repaired in American ports, were being given the most consideration yesterday among those favoring modification.

While most vociferous opposition to the bill has been expected from the Senate's isolationist group, Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, last night told the International News Service that "there is a better chance of beating this bill in the House than in the Senate. The powers it grants to the President are far too vast to vest in any man."

Bitter opposition in the Senate was forecast by Senator Nye (Republican) of North Dakota, who forecast "a last ditch fight."

Strategy Meeting Wednesday

"This is our last fight before the question of war itself is raised," Nye said. "If we lose it, war is almost inevitable."

Nye said a strategy meeting of those Senators intending to attack the bill itself instead of trying to amend it will be held Wednesday.

D. C. Outfit Will Leave for Fort Bliss Today; Col. Walter W. Burns, Gen. Cox Make Addresses at Review Here

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

Washington's 260th Coast Artillery Regiment broke out its battle streamers yesterday in a gesture of farewell to the city for a year.

The gesture and the sight of marching men and the sound of martial music was more than a crowd of 6,000 on the Ellipse could endure with restraint. They broke through police lines that had held them at the distant fringes of the common during the formal ceremony and, forming low lane for the men to march down, said their good-byes in person.

"So long, Joe . . . good luck, Harry," they cried as 850 citizen soldiers, now in the Army, moved off toward the long line of olive drab trucks that will start 500 of them off for a year's training at Fort Bliss, Tex., at 9:30 a. m. today.

There were farewells of the personal kind, too, for Col. Walter W. Burns, the regiment's commander. He was shaking hands with members of the staff of Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard, when, from the crowd, came a man in mufti who was introduced as Gen. Ernest D. Scott, retired. Gen. Scott's command in the Meuse-Argonne sector in the World War included the Sixtieth Coast Artillery, Battery D of which is now Battery D of the 260th. Battery D gives the 260th its "combat history" and entitles the regiment to fly battle streamers.

Next, Morris White, 1614 Olive Street Northeast, presented himself to Col. Burns and was recognized at once. White was the colonel's mess sergeant in France. He said he had a son, Robert, in Battery H and the colonel wanted to know if he could cook.

The historical tie that binds the 260th with the last war was solemnized in a simple ceremony at the Armory preceding the review. It revolved about presentation to Capt. Carl Santilli, commander of Battery D, of a gold ring such as is worn by World War members of

A.F.L. to Fight Curtailment Of Strike Right

Stresses Readiness For 'Sacrifices' in Message to Congress

The American Federation of Labor told Congress yesterday that its members were ready to "make sacrifices" for national defense, but would oppose any attempt to curtail labor's "right to strike."

"It would be suicidal for us, in our haste to build an invulnerable military defense of our country, to abandon democracy in the process," the federation said in presenting its legislative recommendations.

A request that Congress "authorize promptly" defense appropriations asked by President Roosevelt topped the list of recommendations.

The A. F. L. said it would not oppose "reasonable reductions" in relief appropriations, since defense expansion was providing jobs "at such a rapid pace that it appears likely the number of unemployed will be reduced sharply by the end of the year." At the same time, it estimated that there were now 8,000,000 unemployed and said it would insist upon "adequate provision for those unable to find jobs in industry."

It said it would oppose any move to "impair" present Federal labor laws, but proposed these amendments to the Labor Relations Act as "safeguards" against "possible future maladministration:"

1—Opportunity for skilled employes and recognized classifications of workers "to retain their separate unity if they so desire."

2—Direct court appeals by unions

Civil Service Asks to Check Defense Aides

Cites Dearth of Investigators to Carry on Work

Many national defense positions are being filled by persons who have undergone no character examination by the Civil Service Commission, that agency's fifty-seventh annual report disclosed yesterday.

"We strongly urge that one of the best investments the Nation can make is to enable the commission to build up its investigating staff to the point where persons in all defense positions are investigated either before or immediately after they are placed on the job," the report said.

Reminding of "enemies within," the report said "these persons are dangerous in themselves and dangerous because of what they may be able to persuade persons of weak character to do." The "last place where persons of weak character should be permitted to work is within the departments and agencies of the United States Government," it continued.

The commission said that as a practical matter it had never been provided "with anywhere near adequate personnel to carry on this all-important work. The commission sincerely believes that in this respect the country has been penny-wise and pound foolish."

The report, for the fiscal year June 30, 1940, and released yesterday, said the commission had obtained a staff of about 200 investigators, and by January, 1941, the number would have been increased to 250. As a result applicants for

Barbecue in Langley Estate Marks Its End as a Homestead

Lawrence Reid, of Langley, Va., couldn't see the old family homestead taken over by the Government without doing something special before losing it forever. So last night he had friends in for a farewell barbecue.

Harmony Valley had been in his family's possession for over 250 years, he said, but the Public Roads Administration decided that it lay in the midst of an area which was perfectly suited to its needs as an experimental plant and laboratory in testing roads materials. So, as Reid put it, "the only thing I could do was to sell the old place."

The new testing plant is being established to replace the old one at Gravelly Point which had to be moved because of the airport construction, an official of the PRA stated last night. In the future, it is hoped to build experimental roads on the grounds which can be given actual traffic tests, but at present the work will be confined to tests of strength of materials and reactions of underlying earth beds.

The price received from the Government was a good one under the circumstances, Reid believed, but he also said that to purchase another similar farm he would have to pay much more than that price.

Harmony Valley has the richest earth anywhere around here, too," was his complaint, "and the poorest ground in the neighborhood would cost three times what I got for my place."

On the site of the future experimental unit lies an ancient graveyard containing some graves more than 200 years old, the departing landowner declared. The Government has promised to segregate that

Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Jan. 12.—Wendell L. Willkie declared today he favored, "with modification," President Roosevelt's "lend-lease" arms bill, and announced he would fly soon to England for a private survey of the international situation.

He asserted the bill should grant powers to the President "for a fixed term, not too far in the future" and that Congress should not be "harried" in its passage.

Willkie expressed the belief the Nation faced an emergency under which "extraordinary powers must be granted to the elected executive."

Traveling as Citizen

His announcement was contained in a 1,200 word statement given to newspapermen in his office in the Hotel Commodore and amplified through questions and answers at a press conference.

Concerning his trip abroad, Willkie made it clear that he would go solely as a private citizen, and said he sought personal contact with the situation abroad "just as I did when I was practicing law and wanted to know the facts of a case."

Inferentially, Willkie took exception to Alfred M. Landon's recent statement on British-American relations with the words: "I refute the statement that our national security is not involved in a British defeat. The difference between a British defeat or victory is not only military but economic."

Landon Replies

[In Topeka, Kans., Landon, Republican Presidential candidate in 1936, was quoted by United Press as saying that both President Roosevelt and Willkie believed the United States must go to war if necessary to help Britain defeat Germany.

Roosevelt Sets Up Defense Housing Unit

Charles Palmer Named Head; To Coordinate, Speed Construction

Copyright by New York Times

Hyde Park, N. Y., Jan. 12.—President Roosevelt today created by Executive order a new division of Defense Housing Coordination in a move to insure efficient, adequate and speedy construction in connection with the rearmament and military training programs.

He appointed Charles Palmer, who has been housing expert of the Defense Advisory Commission, as its chief with a salary of $9,000 a year.

The President acted under his limited emergency proclamation in establishing the new housing organization, which apparently will have powers in its own field equal to those in other defense work of the recently created defense supercouncil, the Office for Production Management. Roosevelt made the director, who will have the title of coordinator of defense housing, responsible only to him.

Coincidentally, the President made public a letter to Michael Harris, of the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee, praising him for calling off as "unwarranted" a recent strike in the Berwyck (Pa.) plant of the American Car & Foundry Co., which has defense contracts.

To Make Up Time Lost

Roosevelt said he was "even more gratified" to learn that the men had offered to make up without overtime eight hours work lost through the strike. He termed this "in keeping with my request that parties to labor disputes should, during these days, prevent stoppages of work and production."

The President gave the division of Defense Housing Coordination power over "all executive departments and independent agencies (engaged in housing activities), including corporations in which the United States owns all or a majority of the stock, either directly or indirectly."

These would include not only entities like the Federal Housing Authority and the United States Housing Authority, but Army and Navy agencies involved in building cantonments.

Among the duties outlined for the new division were the following:

1. To facilitate "proper coordination of, and economy and efficiency in, the provision of housing facilities essential to national defense."

2. To anticipate housing needs "in localities in which people are engaged, or are to be engaged, in national defense activities, analyze reported defense needs and facilitate the full use of existing housing accommodations."

3. To formulate and recommend to the President "coordinated defense housing projects with the objective of avoiding shortages, delays, duplication and overlapping."

4. To review existing and proposed legislation and recommend such additional legislation "as may be deemed necessary or desirable."

At the same time, the Chief Executive issued a set of regulations requiring each Government housing agency to furnish the coordinator with copies of its available housing surveys and reports and, for his review and recommendations, the standards for housing each has established for the development, operation and management of defense housing.

Willkie Favors Lend-Lease Bill

believed at Hyde Park that President Roosevelt had been informed earlier of this intention.—Editor's note.)

Willkie disclosed that he had applied for a passport three days ago directly to Secretary of State Hull, and had received the Secretary's approval within three hours. He said he intended to travel to Europe by Clipper, would stay in England two or three weeks, and would probably return to the practice of law when he came back.

"The so-called 'lend-lease' bill, now before Congress," said Willkie's statement, "asks for an enormous grant of executive power. Under a democratic system, in which the people's power is preserved by limiting the powers of government, every such grant of power should be jealously scrutinized . . .

"I have examined this bill in the light of the current emergency, and I personally have come to the conclusion that, with modification, it should be adopted."

The People's Choice

"I was . . . perfectly serious in my charge that the reelection of this Administration would jeopardize the continuation of the democratic process in the United States . . .

"Yet the people chose this Administration and we must abide by that choice. We must not fall into the fallacy of depriving it of powers necessary to defend us in order to preserve the mere form of democratic procedure. We must give it the power to act in this emergency, while at the same time assuring ourselves, by competent amendments, of a reversion of that power to us after the emergency is over.

"It is to be hoped that the national debate concerning the bill will not assume a partisan aspect. This should be true even though the Administration pointedly excluded Republicans from the formulating and drafting of the bill and daily continues its partisan attacks . . .

Ready to See "Most Anybody"

Willkie said he had few concrete suggestions to make now concerning modifications of the lend-lease bill but might make suggestions later.

Asked whom he intended to see in Europe, Willkie replied:

"Most anybody who wants to see me."

Army's First Parachute Troop Battalion Ready for Action in Any Enemy Territory

Fort Benning, Ga., Unit Declared Fit After Rigid Training Course

By Harold Tyler

Associated Press Staff Writer

Fort Benning, Ga., Jan. 12 (AP).—The United States Army now has a combat group capable of flying hundreds of miles into enemy territory, seizing and holding vital points such as airports or communications centers.

Officers reported the 501st Parachute Battalion up to full strength of 412 men and 34 officers, trained and toughened for the strenuous job of dropping out of airplanes and going into action quickly.

The 501st has been practicing dropping men a dozen at a time. They can clear their transport ship in ten seconds, hit the ground in 28 seconds and race to their equipment, dropped from another ship, in another few seconds.

Train Mostly on Ground

Parachute troops spend most of their time on the ground training for the split second precision required for such work.

Since starting with a platoon, experimenting with the idea of dropping a combat team more powerful than ordinary air infantry (troops transported by air), Maj. W. M. Miley in a few weeks has built up a battalion, equipped an elaborate training field and staged regular demonstrations with his men.

Officers insist that the parachute troops put out more muscular work than any other army organization. The men and their commanders start off each day with a 2½-mile trot around the field, then up a steep hill. They get the usual army calisthenics drill, with another after lunch.

Practice on Apparatus

Warmed up, the parachutists then go out to a field that resembles a circus practice ground for acrobats and aerialists. Under one wooden frame, soldiers swing down an overhead trolley. Somewhere between the start of their ride and the end of the trolley track, a groundman yanks at a rope and the parachutist comes tumbling to earth.

The purpose is to train men to control the swing of a parachute to avoid being smashed into the ground.

There's another framework equipped with parachute harness in which the men are set to spinning and taught how to stop this dangerous twisting, and how to use the shrouds to guide themselves to better landings.

Arms Delays Laid to Lack Of Aluminum

Chairman O'Mahoney, of the Monopoly Committee, yesterday charged that warplane production has been "seriously delayed" by a shortage of aluminum and contended that the Nation cannot prepare its defense without dealing with numerous conditions "revealed" by the committee's inquiry.

O'Mahoney, Senator from Wyoming, declared the aluminum shortage was due to a policy of "keeping supplies down in order to keep prices up."

His statements were contained in a call for the Temporary National Economic (Monopoly) Committee to meet Wednesday to plan its final report on "concentration of economic power," following its 18-month investigation.

O'Mahoney said that the committee will have before it "impressive evidence indicating that the social and economic problems which it has been studying lie at the root of the present world crisis."

He cited testimony that "certain German industrial corporations, through ownership of United States patents, have not only been in a position to participate in fixing prices and restraining trade in this country, but also to acquire important information with respect to the progress of American military defense.

The chairman's charge of an aluminut shortage followed previous such statements in the airplane industry, but Edward R. Stettinius, defense commissioner in charge of industrial materials, recently declared there were ample supplies.

Supplies Shut Off

O'Mahoney yesterday said that the Defense Commission had been "compelled" to set up priority schedules which shut off aluminum supplies needed by civilians, although the Nation's potential capacity was such that no curtailment should have been necessary. He had been told, he said, that rural electrification projects had been forced to take inferior equipment because of inadequate aluminum supplies.

"The Aluminum Company of America has enjoyed practically complete domination of the field in this country for almost 50 years, through control of plant capacity and raw material," O'Mahoney declared. "It is one of the most profitable enterprises in the country, if not in the world. Yet it has not been supplying enough virgin aluminum to independent manufacturers to be made into airplane propellers and other parts, for lack of which our plane output has been apparently seriously retarded.

"Here is a highly concentrated metal industry essential to the development of the modern community and extremely profitable to its owners, which has not been able as yet to respond to the defense needs of the country because apparently it has been keeping supplies down in order to keep prices up, a policy which it must be admitted is not peculiar to this one industry alone."

The Senator said that "a more significant fact" was that Germany had "far outstripped us" in aluminum production, although prior to the Hitler regime it had practically no aluminum industry.

"It is small wonder," he added, "that he (Hitler) can fill the skies over Britain with airplanes while our deliveries are lagging."

Present Conflict Is World Civil War, Thomas Mann Says

"Reform of the idea of freedom" must be the ultimate gain of a victory of the democracies in the present world conflict, Thomas Mann told a meeting of the Town Hall of Washington last night.

The exiled German writer addressed nearly 1,000 persons at the gathering held at the Shoreham Hotel.

"Democracy is the human adjustment between a logical contrast, the reconciliation of freedom and equality, or individual values and the demands of society," he declared.

"Social democracy is now the order of the day. If democracy is to hold its own, it must be done through socially established freedom, which rescues individual values by friendly and willing concessions to equality; through an economic justice which ties all of democracy's children willingly to it.

"Only then can democracy resist the assault of a dehumanized spirit of violence, and fulfill its great conservative task, to preserve the Christian foundations of occidental life and to protect civilization against barbarism."

Pointing out that political problems are no longer a "game," Dr. Mann said that "Today the problem of man is essentially presented to us in a political form. Today it is a matter of the ultimate values of civilizations, of those universal ties which we call religion, being in danger of destruction by beast-man."

World Civil War

This present conflict he defined as "a world civil war which has nothing in common with the national wars of the past. National frontiers are breaking down."

The victory of the democracies over the totalitarian states "is America's concern, not only in the moral sense but in the most vital sense," he emphasized.

Warning of the dangers of an attitude of pacifism today, Dr. Mann said: "Those men (who came to power in the totalitarian states), foul from head to toe with the blood of their campatriots, constantly used the word 'peace' to betray."

He dismissed the conception that the war is a "rise of the proletariat," pointing out that Germany spent $40,000,000,000 in four years for armament. "Is that poverty?" he asked.

"Hitler is not a revolutionary but a free-booting exploiter of the revolution, not a lion but a hyena," he declared. He is not a revolutionary; he is a swindler of history, and his bankruptcy is only a question of time."

Dr. Mann stressed that "the greatest event taking place in this war is the unification of the English-speaking world." Stating that this country is unified, he yet impressed his audience with "a certain contrast" in the two basic tenets of democracy—freedom and equality—which in their pure meaning are "mutually exclusive."

"Freedom" implies the individual, while "equality" implies "social need limiting the freedom of the individual," he pointed out.

"But there is not a real contradiction," he continued. "The conflict between the two is transcended in Christianity . . . The value and dignity which democracy bestows on the individual are not contradicted by the equality of all before God."

Senator Ralph O. Brewster, of Maine; Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Post; and Ernest Griffith, director of the legislative reference service of the Library of Congress, composed the panel which questioned Dr. Mann. John W. Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education, served as chairman.

Erika Mann, daughter of the writer, was on the platform and aided in interpreting some of the questions presented to her father.

Mr. Meyer asked Dr. Mann if he believed Great Britain's war aims should be presented to the world at present.

Declaring that a clear presentation of the war aims of Great Britain would make a strong impression on the German people now," Dr. Mann stated:

"Perhaps the moment for that has not yet come. Perhaps it would be premature. But toward the enlightenment of the German people it would be very valuable."

Senator Brewster asked, "What may be the prospects of the spread of democratic culture within Germany?"

Dr. Mann replied that National Socialism has been "such an extreme experiment" that it may give place to a "new creation of democratic ideals on the part of the people—especially if the rest of Europe changes too."

Text of Willkie's Statement on Lend-Lease Aid to Britain

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 12.—The text of Wendell L. Willkie's statement on the Administration's "lease-lend" bill follows:

The so-called "lend-lease" bill now before Congress asks for an enormous grant of executive power. Under a democratic system, in which the people's power is preserved by limiting the powers of government, every such grant of power should be jealously scrutinized. That is a general rule for democracy, and that rule should be applied doubly to this bill. We must not lose our democracy at home while seeking to preserve democracy abroad. It is therefore the duty of the opposition to examine every provision of the bill thoroughly.

I have examined this bill in the light of the current emergency, and I personally have come to the conclusion that with modification it should be adopted.

This is a critical moment in history. The United States is not a belligerent and we hope we shall not be. Our problem, however, is not alone to keep America out of war, but to keep war out of America. Democracy is endangered. And the American people are so aware of the danger that they have indorsed the policy of giving full and active aid to those democracies which are resisting aggression. At the same time, the people are virtually unanimous in their desire to build for the United States the strongest defense system in the world.

Dire Circumstances

It is the history of democracy that, under such dire circumstances, extraordinary powers must be granted to the elected Executive. Democracy cannot hope to defend itself from aggression in any other way. It is for this reason only that I favor grant of power at this time to the present Administration.

However, there are certain considerations that ought to be taken into account.

1. Congress must not be harried into passage of this bill. Some of these days by that process we will be rushed right out of our democracy. This bill should be subjected to thorough debate, and such amendments should be made as Congress, representing the people, may deem necessary to retain in its own hands the fundamental power to declare war.

2. In a democracy, every grant of extraordinary power should contain a clause automatically giving that power back to the people. In the case of this bill the powers should be granted for a fixed term, not too far in the future, at which time Congress will automatically have a chance to review the bill, and either continue the powers or revoke them. Likewise the bill should specifically provide that the powers granted are of a temporary and not a permanent nature.

People Have Chosen

3. It is hoped the discussion of this bill does not take the form of opposition to granting power to this Administration just because it is this Administration. We could all wish that this Administration loved power less and that it more readily relinquished it when the purpose for which it was granted had ceased to exist. I think I can say without boast that no man in this country has done more to stress the record of this Administration in this regard, or to paint the dangers of it. I was, moreover, perfectly serious in my charge that the reelection of this Administration would jeopardize the continuation of the democratic process in the United States. And I believe many of its acts since reelection sustain my position.

Yet the people chose this Administration, and we must abide by that choice. We must not fall into the fallacy of depriving it of powers necessary to defend us in order to preserve the mere forms of democratic procedure. We must give it the power to act in this emergency, while at the same time assuring ourselves, by competent amendments, of a reversion of that power to us after the emergency is over.

4. It is to be hoped that the national debate concerning the bill will not assume a partisan aspect. This should be true even though the Administration pointedly excluded Republicans from the formulating and drafting of the bill and daily continues its partisan attacks. The Republicans will gain much in public esteem if they ignore this confusion of partisanship with patriotism.

"Still Too Much Politics"

5. While the debate over this bill is going on the Administration can well devote itself without loss of time in the accomplishment of our national objective to concentrating on organizing the defense program. This program is obviously lagging. The Administration has failed to make simple organizational moves that would bring about more rapid production. There is still too much politics, public showmanship, and cheap propaganda in the defense program and the plans are still obscure. Big industrial names do not build a defense. Organization, planning and hard work will. We must place more confidence in industry—whether labor or management—and set ourselves higher goals.

6. I hope the debate concerning this bill is confined to the merits of the bill. Appeasers, isolationists, or lip-service friends of Britain will seek to sabotage the program for aid to Britain and her Allies behind the screen of opposition to the bill. It makes a vital difference to the United States which side prevails in the present conflict. I refute the statement that our national security is not involved in a British defeat. The difference between a British defeat or victory is not only military but economic. For many years now, owing to the restrictive economic legislation of the New Deal and to the unrest and uncertainty of Europe, we have been maintaining our standard of living by lavish deficit spending. In the long run, this expedient won't work. It will end in national bankruptcy, inflation, collapse, and the supplanting of the democratic system by a totalitarian system in this country. If Germany wins the present war, and the trade routes of the world are closed to us, or opened only on a totalitarian basis, we shall inevitably suffer either such a collapse, or the adoption of totalitarian controls of our economic life. We shall be driven back to a controlled economy, as to both foreign and domestic trade.

Plans Trip to England

The hope for democracy is the victory of those powers which believe in our way of life, and in a peace that really assures the principle of free enterprise throughout the world; the reopening of the trade routes, the reestablishment of the open markets and the rebirth of the confidence of men in one another.

The present bill, I believe, must be considered in the light of the total situation. We must see the world whole, and we must recognize the dangers that face us, not alone from within, but also from without. For this very reason I am personally planning in the near future a trip to England. I shall take the trip in order to see what conditions are over there, and to obtain a broader perspective on such matters as this current bill and other problems with which the American people will inevitably be faced while democracy is under attack.

New Defense Aid: Plant Workers Get Vitamin Pills

Minneapolis, Jan. 12 (AP).—A Minneapolis machine company has adopted an unusual "health conservation program," distributing daily vitamin pills to all workers in a move to keep manpower at a maximum for the national defense program.

Leighton Wilkie, president of Continental Machines, Inc., said the company always faced a mass exodus from work in February due to colds contracted in the long, severe winters here. Often as many as half the 350 employes missed work.

"Our personal experience with cod liver oil capsules and other vitamin tablets when taken consistently during the winter months is that they build up an effective resistance to colds," Wilkie explained in Steel magazine. "Recently we decided to ration these capsules to our men so that this coming February we will not lose any such number of man hours."

Beneficiaries Know This About Life Insurance

'HINDSIGHT AND FORESIGHT'
a weekly column by
Holgar J. Johnson
President Institute of Life Insurance

THERE are now 6½ times as many policyholders as there were in 1900. Since your father's time, there has been an amazing spread of life insurance benefits, until today almost every family has at least one life insurance policy.

JOHNSON

It has been suggested that this ought to make life insurance easier to sell in the next generation. Certainly it seems reasonable to suppose that tomorrow's policy owners will have learned at firsthand, as today's beneficiaries, the advantages of life insurance in action.

From my experience I doubt that this will change the sales problem of the agent, for this problem is not primarily to overcome lack of appreciation of the benefits of life insurance. Over 96% of all adult Americans believe thoroughly in the principle of life insurance.

The problem tomorrow will probably be the same as it is today—to persuade a man who already knows he needs protection to make the sacrifices necessary to get it and keep it. This has always been one of the most difficult jobs in the world—and one of the most important.

Even though it will probably always be necessary to sell insurance protection, I believe that the great extension of the benefits of life insurance we are witnessing today will bring about better use of it in the future. A person who has actually seen life insurance in action will be more inclined to make it a matter of course to tell his agent what the agent needs to know about his financial status and his family circumstances in order to work out a sound plan and keep it up to date.

Also, as time goes on, there will be more and more frank and open discussion about insurance within the family, for one who has been a beneficiary should have learned how important it is for his own beneficiaries to know in advance what the insurance is expected to accomplish. He will think of life insurance not as a private matter, but as family business—the most important of all business matters affecting the fortune of his family.

This regular Monday column is provided by the Institute of Life Insurance to permit its President to speak to America's policy owners. Address inquiries to the Institute at 60 East 42nd St., New York City.

Bulgars Warned War Is Near; Soviet Denies Consenting to Nazi Invasion

Philoff Says U. S. Aid Means Long Conflict

Hopes to Keep Nation Out, Says Axis Creed Is Alien to His People

By the Associated Press

Ruse, Bulgaria, Jan. 12.—Premier Bogdan Philoff told his people tonight that they might yet be brought into the war, but he said he was sure they "would not forgive anybody who tried to make Bulgaria National Socialist, Communist or Fascist."

In a speech at this frontier town, just across the Danube from Rumania (where hundreds of thousands of German soldiers are massed), the premier avoided reference to reports abroad of German pressure on Bulgaria, but said specifically that Bulgaria wants to follow her own traditions.

"National Socialism, Fascism and Communism may be good for Germany, Italy and Russia," he said, "but they cannot be transplanted to Bulgarian soil."

Refers to Roosevelt

President Roosevelt's recent statements, he said, reflect the dangers of the present "gigantic battle which threatens to go around the whole world."

The President's message to Congress, he went on, "unquestionably" is an indication of a long war which is likely to spread to other parts of the world.

The aims of Bulgarian foreign policy, he said, are "to guard the people from the terror of war and in general to keep Bulgaria and all the Balkans at peace," but he added:

"To keep the peace does not depend on Bulgaria. We must realize that one day we may have to enter the war."

Gives Thanks for Dobruja

Stressing that "the people must be prepared to defend their vital interests," the premier thanked Italy, Germany and Russia for settlement of the Dobruja question. Southern Dobruja was returned to Bulgaria by Rumania some weeks ago.

He spoke in friendly fashion of Rumania and said Bulgaria hoped to obtain her other revisionist claims by peaceful means.

The general impression among Bulgarians was that Philoff foresaw that a power such as Germany might enter Bulgaria, but it would be under Bulgarian protest.

Philoff said the army is better equipped than even in the last war, when Bulgaria was a German ally, although rearmament has been under way only two years.

Gibson Admits War Danger In Aiding Allies

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Former Senator Ernest W. Gibson, of Vermont, new national chairman of the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, defined the committee's objective today as all possible material aid to the Allies—but he frankly declared it involved the risk of going to war.

"As I see it," the 39-year-old chairman said, "the only chance the democracies have for peace is to keep those fighting for democracy supplied now, and if that isn't sufficient, then it looks like we will get into the war.

"On the other hand, if we do what the isolationists would have us do—that is, surround ourselves by a wall—then we'll get into the war just that much sooner.

"I have confidence," Gibson said, "that the time is near when the Axis countries will collapse from within. I think that with our material, with our arsenal for democracy, the British can win the war."

Communists Expel Hathaway, Former 'Worker' Editor

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Clarence Hathaway, onetime power in the Communist Party, has been expelled "for failure to meet personal and political responsibility assumed by him, for desertion, and for failing and refusing to take steps to rehabilitate himself," the Daily Worker disclosed today.

Hathaway, as editor of the Daily Worker, was convicted last May of criminal libel against Mrs. Edith Liggett and the memory of her husband, Walter Liggett, slain Minneapolis publisher. He is free on $1,000 bail pending appeal.

The former editor was a member of the Communist central executive committee.

Dies Says Spies Enter as Seamen

White Plains, N. Y., Jan. 12 (AP).—Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the House Committee Investigating Un-American Activities, charged tonight that agents of foreign governments were entering this country aboard ships whose owners had been paid to allow the men to ship as seamen.

In a speech at the Westchester County center, Dies declared his committee knew "that certain foreign governments are paying steamship companies to allow the men to ship as seamen."

He said that because of a law permitting foreign seamen to debark and remain in this country 60 days, "We have no means of registering them or fingerprinting them and we have no information on how many have deserted ship."

some defense jobs are now being investigated.

"In all frankness, however, the commission must report that there are still many defense positions to which persons are being certified without an investigation," it was said.

In a series of recommendations, the commission urged that it "be placed in the position where it can certify to the country that no person is occupying a national defense position whose character has not been thoroughly investigated."

It asked that constant consideration be given by all concerned to the elimination of every unnecessary step in connection with the handling of personnel matters; and urged continuance of the present financial support the commission is receiving, so as to insure the fact that there will be no breakdown in the defense program insofar as the securing of civilian personnel is concerned.

The Commission said it was not duplicating the investigating work of the Justice, War, Navy or any other unit, but is utilizing their resources to the fullest possible extent.

"Later Than You Think"

"We believe that it is later than you think and have operated, are operating and will continue to operate accordingly," the Commission said.

"Every Federal employe who is participating to any degree whatever in the national defense program should shape his life so that he can give to the Government all of the energy and talents at his disposal . . . The vast majority are rendering the maximum of service, but if it becomes clear that employes, supervisors, or administrators in any unit are not doing so, immediate steps should be taken to correct such situations.

"There can be no slow downs, intentional or unintentional, either in or out of the Government," it said.

Knows of No Move on Sofia, Moscow Says

Kremlin Uninformed Of Any Possible Advance Into Bulgaria

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Jan. 12.—Soviet Russia has not consented to any passage of German troops into Bulgaria nor has she been informed of such a move if it has occurred, it was announced officially late tonight.

A special communique distributed by Tass, official Soviet Russian news agency, was broadcast by the Moscow radio an hour ahead of the usual news bulletin.

The Tass statement, in denial of foreign press reports, asserted Germany never has asked Russia's consent to the entrance of German soldiers into Bulgaria and Bulgaria never has aproached Russia with an inquiry regarding the passage of German troops through her borders.

"Sister Nations"

A similar communique was issued at the time of the entry of the Germans into Rumania last fall.

Russia and Bulgaria traditionally have maintained close and friendly relations as "sister Slavic" nations.

(Tass denials of reports allegedly published outside Russia usually constitute the Kremlin's method of making its position known by indirection rather than by a direct statement.

(With German troops stationed on the Danube River across from Bulgaria, there has been speculation as to whether Germany asked her pact partner, Russia, to permit soldiers to enter Bulgaria, a little friend of the Soviets, or to pass through that country to attack Greece.)

The Tass statement said that if German troops actually are in Bulgaria and if the further dispatch of German troops to Bulgaria is under way, "all this has occurred without the knowledge and consent of the U. S. S. R. since the German side never raised before the U. S. S. R. the question of the presence or dispatch of German troops to Bulgaria."

No Queries From Bulgaria

"In particular," Tass added, "the Bulgarian government never approached the U. S. S. R. with an inquiry regarding the passage of troops to Bulgaria and consequently could not receive any reply from the U. S. S. R."

The Tass statement began with an assertion that the foreign press, "referring to certain Bulgarian circles as the source of information," had circulated a report that a certain number of German troops already had been sent to Bulgaria, that the dispatching of Nazi troops to Bulgaria was continuing with the knowledge and consent of Russia and that the Russian government had "replied by consent to an inquiry by the Bulgarian government concerning the passage of German troops to Bulgaria."

(Premier Bogdan Philoff, of Bulgaria, in a broadcast speech at Ruse, Bulgaria, said his country might yet be involved in war but that he was certain they "would not forgive anybody who tried to make Bulgaria National Socialist (Nazi), Communist or Fascist. He avoided reference to foreign reports of German pressure on Bulgaria.)

Burbank, Calif., Jan. 12 (AP).—A cross-country transport plane with the passenger seats removed brought 2,500 pounds of Duralumin tubing to Lockheed aircraft factory today from Pittsburgh, in 14 hours and 33 minutes, in contrast to the usual rail freight transit time of up to ten days.

Lockheed said the tubing was needed quickly for an experimental development in connection with its national defense plane orders.

The contract, Rye said, included wage increases, vacations with pay, sole bargaining rights, improved negotiating procedure, leaves of absence with full seniority rights for men called to military service, and maternity leaves for women employes.

Turks Ready To Strike if Germans Move

Would Go to War, Says Spokesman; See British Victory

Istanbul, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—A high Turkish official told the United Press today that Turkey will declare war if German troops cross the Rumanian frontier into Bulgaria.

This official, in an exclusive interview, said that the next two weeks probably would disclose the intentions of German divisions now massed in Rumania across the Danube from Bulgaria.

Germany's intention, this source said, must be one of three:

1. To put pressure upon or to attack Russia;
2. To attack Turkey, simultaneously attacking Greece, or
3. Merely to protect the Rumanian oil fields against internal trouble and possible British air raids.

Responsible Turkish quarters were quoted as saying aid from the United States would "insure a British victory."

Speaking of the concentration of German troops in Rumania, the United Press' informant said the number of these forces and the nature of their equipment was expected to give observers a good hint as to their intentions.

In any event, this source said, there is little to be feared before April—as even in March the Balkans are too mud-bogged for Germany's mechanized forces to operate in strength.

Although asserting flatly that Turkey would fight if the Germans start through Bulgaria, the informant said the cabinet would have to determine Turkey's attitude in event of a German attack on Greece by way of Yugoslavia.

For the moment the Turks consider it more to their advantage to keep the Germans uncertain rather than to announce their intentions.

Betty Barzin, in private life, is the wife of an eminent professor of philosophy at Brussels University who, accompanied by her, has come to America as guest professor of the new School for Social Research in New York. After their departure from Brussels in the wake of the Nazi invasion, they were hounded as "dangerous intellectuals" by Hitler's Gestapo and managed to escape from Paris to Toulouse in the unoccupied zone just one jump ahead of Nazi agents.

Belgian Journalist and Magazine Writer

(World Copyright 1941 by International News Service. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or part strictly prohibited.)

New York, Jan. 12.—"Is Marshal Petain going to yield?" "Will France be entirely subdued by Germany."

These questions are on everybody's lips nowadays.

MME. BARZIN

News leaking out of France suggests that the marshal is resisting, and those who, like myself, have left France very recently, well know that his resistance is caused by the surge of French public opinion, above all by that of public opinion which has retained its freedom of speech, namely, the women of France.

I fled to the unoccupied zone together with thousands of French women who, like myself, feared the German Gestapo more than they feared Nazi bombs. And in this zone of France I have led the same life as those women, a hard life of daily strife for food.

I have gone through all the anxiety caused by the lack of coal in villages where there is no gas or electrical cooking apparatus, and the even greater anxiety caused by a lack of soap and washing powder which made washing and laundry a daily problem.

I have, with an endless number of French women, searched a whole town for black and white cotton and for black and gray darning wool with which to mend linen and socks which could not be replaced for lack of hosiery and underwear in French shops and warehouses.

I have lived their life, I have talked to hundreds of them, to wealthy women, as well as to peasant girls, teachers, clerks, shop assistants, nurses and mill workers.

"And supposing I am asked what you think about American food supplies for France?" I asked one or two of my French friends who saw me off at Montpellier.

"Tell them that we are immensely grateful every time we hear or read about American thoughtfulness and kindness. But tell them also that we know we must do without everything which is in any way likely to prove a help, however small, to Germany. If by some ingenious formula American food could come direct to our homes on a magic carpet, with certainty it would not reach the Germans, we would gladly take it. But if this is attempted, every precaution must be taken to prevent it from falling into Nazi hands."

The women of France were never fully politically emancipated and the "new order" does not yet affect them. They are just mothers, daughters, sisters, fiancees and friends of the 2,000,000 Frenchmen who are in German prison camps, and of the many millions of embittered men who go about free but are expected to forget all about freedom; and of the thousands of French youths who are drafted into labor camps where, under the name of "Compagnons De France," they are supposed to realize all the fallacies of "decayed democracy," as the exponents of the "new order" put it.

It is the lot of the women of France to see to it that France does not crumble altogether, both morally and materially, just as it is up to them to keep the home fires burning without coal and to replenish the larder in spite of insufficient food rations.

The men have played their part, and for the time being they are out of action, but they know, even though some of them refuse to admit it, that the women of France will save France as they have already done in the previous war.

The French woman has been totally misrepresented by a certain school of novelists and playrights. The part assigned to her in hundreds of books and plays has been limited to the immoral amorous "triangle," to an exponent of the art of dressing and make-up, and French can-can.

No woman in the world cares more for her home and children; no woman in the world is more apt to run her husband's business if necessary; no woman in the world is more ready to rise to the occasion and to step into the breach, and —which is even more remarkable— to step away from the limelight when circumstances no longer justify her being in the foreground.

"Why Didn't They Fight?"

In September, 1939, the women of France were called upon to take the place of French manhood in almost every aspect of national life. They came forward, all of them, and like their mothers in 1914, they did their duty. When it gradually became clear that France was falling out of battle, their lips tightened. They could not, they would not believe it. They felt a sweeping sense of shame. As far as they could they avoided criticism and hid their disappointment.

Yet many a time I have heard old black-gowned women mutter: "What has happened to our men? Why did they not fight? What is the good of an armistice when one is the loser? Even unprepared, we should have held on . . ."

And I have witnessed many young ones who, although relieved at the thought that their beloved would no longer have to face the fury of German armored tanks and aerial bombs, complain:

"This is not my father's spirit."

To this day the women of France refuse to consider defeat as final. To them, old Marshal Petain is the man of Verdun and they challenge him to hold on now as he did in the days of the greatest of European battles.

They do not trust the head of the Vichy government, but they trust the man who won the Battle of Verdun. They are convinced he is playing a double game and will outwit the Germans.

Once only did the confidence of French women in the old marshal waver. In September, when he went to meet Hitler and had his first talk about cooperation, a picture was published in the muzzled French press showing Petain smilingly shaking hands with the Fuehrer.

French women will never forgive that smile.

Hillman Plans New Defense Labor Setup

'Streamlined' Agency Would Include A.F.L., C.I.O. Spokesmen

By Louis Stark.

Copyright by New York Times

Reorganization of the entire labor defense setup is being charted by Sidney Hillman, associate director general of the newly created Office for Production Management, it was reported yesterday.

The new plan calls for a "streamlined" evolution of the present machinery which is said to have developed too many aspects of temporary and emergency organizations.

Although the new plan has not been worked out in detailed form it is reported to set up a functional organization extending from the OPM down to local communities and carrying with it every phase of the labor division's activities.

The new organization would seek to formalize some of the activities already being engaged in by Hillman and his staff and would concentrate responsibility more closely.

According to the reorganization plan spokesmen from the American Federation of Labor, the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the railway unions and from industry would hold responsible executive posts as assistants to Hillman in charge of various sections of the work such as labor relations, training, information, statistics and technical problems.

Plan Mediation Board

The plan calls for 20 field representatives from the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. with additional ones from the railway organizations. The work of these men will be to mediate and adjust disputes that may lead to strikes before they can break out into actual stoppages.

The field representatives will report to a coordinator in the Washington office. Robert W. Watt, A. F. of L. representative at the international labor office, is being mentioned as chief of coordination activity. Others who may be called upon to assist in the work of coordination are said to be Martin Durkin, Illinois labor commissioner, and Joseph Keenan, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor. The latter is already mediating disputes for the labor division.

In charge of labor relations with industry would be Edward Bransome, of the Vanadium Corporation, who is also assisting the labor division in mediating disputes. His duties would be enlarged.

Channing R. Dooley, on leave from the Socony-Vacuum Co. and in charge of the labor division's "in-training" program, would probably be given supreme command of all training facilities.

Dr. Isadore Lubin, chief of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, now assistant administrator in the labor division, would be in charge of all technical matters and would act as coordinator with other divisions of the new defense setup.

Promotion for Harris

Herbert Harris, Hillman's press aide, would be moved up into anadministrative post.

An enlarged staff also would be set up under Morris L. Cooke, industrial engineer who is now concentrating on propagandizing the idea of "farming out" defense contracts.

Chief resistance to the plan will probably come from the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. Neither William Green, president of the A. F. of L., nor Philip Murray, president of the C. I. O., is satisfied with the manner in which Hillman selected the 16 members of his Labor Advisory Committee for the National Defense Advisory Commission.

Instead of asking the two labor organizations to officially nominate men for the advisory committee who would have the backing of the two organizations, Green and Murray maintain that Hillman designated these men himself. The result is, as they have made clear, that the spokesmen for labor unions on the advisory committee speak for themselves or for their unions but not officially for the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O.

Hillman's aides insist that opportunities were offered to the top ranking officials of the two labor organizations to name their spokesmen officially but that this was not done.

However, both Green and Murray have taken the position that in the future they must be consulted on all defense policies in which labor is interested.

Once the appointments are made as a result of official consultation between the O. P. M. and the chiefs of the labor organizations, the latter, it was indicated, may be expected to place the machinery of their organizations at the services of the objectives set under the new plan.

Capital Applies Final Make-up for Role Of Host to Inauguration Day Thousands

Washington in all the essentials has prepared for the big task it takes once every four years—acting as host to the Nation's tens of thousands who want to watch a President inaugurated and join in the resulting festivities.

Some of the bunting is up; a new stand for spectators will be erected today in front of the District Building and the expectation is for a sell-out of stands seats, numbering approximately 26,000, for which the occupants will pay a total of some $91,000, it was announced last night.

Many seats, in favorable locations, are still available, however, it was said by the grandstand ticket committee chairman, Melvin D. Hildreth. This is especially so in Stand No. 8, at Pennsylvania Avenue and Fifteenth Street, and there are many $6 seats in the stand across from the one on which the President will review the two-hour long parade.

Meanwhile, the Inaugural Committee yesterday expected a large attendance at the interdenominational religious service at 2:30 p. m. next Sunday in the Inaugural Court of Freedom, on Pennsylvania Avenue, in front of the White House.

This service, said the committee, will be "a solemn symbolization of the solidarity of the American people." It will be one of a series of divine services to invoke guidance for the Chief Executive and the Nation in the world-wide emergency.

"They speak around the world for what America stands—the solidarity of its people, regardless of religious conviction, and the religious freedom which is the right of every man in this bulwark of democracy," observed Capt. R. D. Workman, Chief of Chaplains, United States Navy. The service will last 20 minutes.

The speakers will be the Rev. Dr. John Keating Cartwright, pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, representing the Catholic faith; Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, representing the Jewish faith, and the Rev. Dr. Seth R. Brooks, pastor of the Universalist National Memorial Church, representing the Protestant denominations.

Holders of any grandstand tickets, regardless of price and location, may occupy seats in the Court of Freedom for the services, the committee announced.

Hildreth pointed out that ticket purchasers will be enabled to use the stands for more than just one view of inaugural events. They can watch the President while en route from the White House to the Capitol at 11:30 a. m.; they may see the President's return to the White House after the inaugural address; they may witness the projected air show involving 280 planes at 1:30 p. m., and see the inaugural parade, starting at 1:45 p. m.

New Defense Unit to Study Raid Shelters

Also to Provide For Guarding Power And Water Supplies

Problems of providing air raid shelters for American civilians and protection of water and power supplies in case of war yesterday were placed in the hands of a special defense unit organized by the War Department.

Secretary of War Stimson announced creation of the National Technological Civil Protection Committee, composed of seven engineers of wide reputation, each representing a national engineering organization.

Named to the committee were:

Walter D. Binger, of the American Society of Civil Engineers, New York City, chairman; W. H. Carrier, of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, Syracuse, N. Y.; Harry E. Jordan, American Waterworks Association, New York City; A. B. Ray, American Institute of Chemical Engineers, New York City.

Abel Wolman, American Public Health Association, Baltimore; James L. Walsh, American Society of Mechanical Engineers, New York City, and Scott Turner, American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, New York City.

Maj. Eugene W. Ridings, of the War Department general staff, was designated to act as the military contact member with the group.

The group will be provided by the War Department, it was said, "with pertinent information of the very latest successful methods employed abroad to safeguard civilian communities against air and other attack."

Ship Contracts Closed

At the same time it was learned that contracts for private operation of three of the six shipyards the Government is establishing to build the 200 cargo vessels proposed in President Roosevelt's emergency program were closed Saturday by the Maritime Commission.

Cities in which the yards will be situated, names of the operating concerns and their own plans for division among themselves of the estimated 87 ships entailed, are as follows:

Los Angeles — California Shipbuilding Corporation, 31 ships. Heading this concern is Steven Bechtel, president, Seattle-Tacoma Shipbuilding Corporation.

Portland, Oreg. — Oregon Shipbuilding Corporation, 31 vessels. The company's head is C. A. Shea of Los Angeles, associated with shipbuilding work there and in San Francisco.

Houston, Tex. — Houston Shipbuilding Corporation, 25 ships. The company was organized by John D. Reilley, president, Todd Shipyards Corporation, of New York.

Meanwhile the Foreign Policy Association said that successful defense of the Western Hemisphere "may depend on the rapid extension of inter-American cooperation to include joint military action against external aggression.

The Private Research Association commented in one of its fortnightly reports that "a first step in this direction may be the development of inter-American bases for common defense, which would implement the continued improvement of existing American defense outposts in the Atlantic."

While the United States has not entered into any "elaborate defense arrangements" with any Latin American Republic except Panama, the association said, the "political and legal groundwork for a broad scheme of cooperative military action has been prepared."

Inter-American cooperation is particularly needed, the association said, to guard against a non-hemisphere power's establishing bases in the Americas.

on foot are not doing everything that it is possible for them to do to prevent accidents.

"I realize," he said, "that the men in the cars and walking the beats have many other duties besides traffic, but I feel there are many things they could do that would reduce traffic accidents if they had a better understanding of when and how to do them."

Miller made it clear that he was not accusing members of the department of negligence. He emphasized also that he was not suggesting a drive for traffic safety that would die out in a few weeks, but was interested in a continuing and consistent police program.

"A lot of arrests is not the answer to the traffic accident problem," he said. "We are making plenty of arrests now. We want to make our arrests selectively."

Miller also revealed that the department is about to embark on a program of traffic education through use of radio and distribution of pamphlets explaining regulations.

Both Miller and Maj. Brown were skeptical of the value of a citizen vigilance committee to report violators. Both pointed out that the system was tried in 1934 through the "secret committee of 100" named by Maj. Brown and provided with facilities for reporting violators.

Controversy and hard feelings are the result, Miller said, when citizens report violators and follow through by helping prosecute them as witnesses.

Maj. Brown said the 1934 experience showed that the majority of offenders reported took a kindly view of the operations of the committee, but that a minority, some of them influential citizens, branded the procedure as "persecution" and "un-American."

Both Brown and Miller emphasized that they considered it a citizen's duty to make a report of a violation when he sees one and that the department is anxious to get such assistance. Brown warned, however, that a citizen who swears to a violation warrant is open to civil action if the accused motorist is not convicted.

The suggestion for a citizens' vigilance committee came from Charles D. Drayton, 4625 Garfield Street Northwest, whose daughter, Betty Dunbar Drayton, 19, and friend, Alva Van Court, jr., 21, Princeton University student, were struck by a hit-run driver at Wisconsin and Massachusetts Avenues Northwest. They had attended Christmas Eve services at Washington Cathedral.

Yesterday worshippers at both the cathedral and at St. Albans Church heard unprecedented appeals, made from the pulpit, for members of the congregations to assist the Police Department in their hunt for the hit-run driver. The Rev. Dr. Charles T. Warner, rector of St. Albans, and the Rev. William M. Bradner, canon precentor of the cathedral, asked any parishioner with information on the accident to report it to the Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of the cathedral. There was no immediate response.

Both Miss Drayton and Van Court were reported to be recovering from their injuries. Van Court, near death for several days following the accident, was expected to leave Emergency Hospital today. Miss Drayton was released several days ago.

Col. David McCoach, jr., District engineer commissioner, and William A. Van Duzer, traffic director, reacted favorably to Drayton's suggestion. "A potential traffic violator might be inclined to slow down and take things easy if he knew there was a chance of being reported," Van Duzer said. Both doubted the desirability of a secret committee.

Most civic leaders received the idea enthusiastically, but some were frankly skeptical. James E. Colliflower, president of the Board of Trade, said he would "want to give the suggestion a lot of thought."

Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, declared:

"The difficulty with a system like that is that some people are inclined to get an exaggerated idea of their own importance and start reporting minor infractions."

Baxter Smith, chairman of the federation's safety committee, said the idea is "worthy, but lends itself easily to grudges."

P. Y. K. Howatt, chairman of the Board of Trade traffic committee, said he thought the idea "splendid if the reporters of violations really follow them up."

the battery. The ring belonged to Carl Edmondston, of Washington, formerly a corporal in the old battery. He made the presentation.

Col. Burns displayed the regimental insignia on his shoulder. The cactus in one corner, he said, recalls the organization's Mexican border service, while the ace of diamonds in another corner is the insignia of Battery D. He translated the Latin motto: "Ferio, Tego . . . I strike, I defend."

Before the crowd broke and after Gen. Cox, the colonel and staff reviewed the troops, Burns made a farewell speech.

"There comes a time in the lives of all men when all we have left are our traditions," he told the crowd. "We want those traditions to be of the right kind."

Gen. Cox's speech was directed to the soldiers. He said:

"It is with gratitude and with tremendous pride that I have the opportunity to wish you Godspeed and to congratulate the regiment . . . As you go forth as soldiers of your country . . . bear in mind the pride the District will have in you . . . I look for you to return better soldiers, better citizens and better men . . . Godspeed and happy return."

Before the review, Gen. Cox presented to the regiment its new colors—a new American flag and regimental standard. The old colors were "retired," and the ceremony marked the transfer of the regiment from foot to mounted troops.

Four gun batteries of the regiment—Batteries A, B, C and D—are scheduled to leave at 9:30 a. m., Batteries C and D to depart from the Pennsylvania Avenue Armory and to pick up Batteries A and B at Maine and O Avenues Southwest. The Regimental Headquarters unit will leave the Armory at 10:45 p. m., meeting the medical detachment and the band at Maine Avenue and O Street on the way out of town.

Units of the Second Battalion are scheduled to march from the Armory to Union Station at 6:30 o'clock tonight. Their train will depart for Fort Bliss in two sections at 8 p. m.

Elaborate precautions have been taken, it was revealed last night, to see that the men are well fed and do not get lost en route. Capt. Lawrence W. Linderer, regimental supply officer, will precede the motor convoy to arrange for feeding and sleeping facilities at all points where the regiment is scheduled to make stops. Lieut. Max A. Setzke and a staff have been assigned the job of marking the route with stickers. In addition, regiment officers have been provided with 375 State maps, 125 trip maps and full information on bridge-load limits and clearances by the American Automobile Association.

Col. Burns last night announced that mail for personnel of the motor convoy will be received by the regiment only at the following places and must be received at the city postoffice on or before the times set forth below:

Waycross, Ga., 1:50 p. m., January 15; De Funiac Springs, Fla., 2:25 a. m., January 17; Baton Rouge, La., 11:05 p. m., January 21; Houston, Tex., 5:50 p. m., January 22, and Marfa, Tex., 5:50 p. m., January 25.

Marshall Speaks But Shuns Meeting

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Verne Marshall, chairman of the No Foreign War Committee, tonight broadcast from Mutual Broadcasting System studios rather than from a meeting in Queens County because of "an effort to make it appear that the Queens meeting was under questionable auspices."

He charged that "individuals, groups or organizations" planned to demonstrate at the meeting of the Queens County Association to Keep America Out of War.

Marshall urged his listeners to demand that their Congressmen "give not one bit of authority to the President."

3—Amendments "preserving the integrity of collective bargaining agreements lawfully entered into by bona fide labor organizations."

4—Amendments "to eliminate the outrageous delays that jeopardize the organizational gains made by many labor unions."

5—A five-member Labor Relations Board.

Other Recommendations

Among other points in the program were:

"Adequate appropriations" for the Dies Committee and the Federal Bureau of Investigation for "vigilant investigation and prompt suppression of the activities of direct agents of hostile foreign governments in our country, and fifth column movement."

Extension of United States Housing Act to provide homes for workers in defense industries, and "assure adaptability of such housing to the post-emergency needs of low-income families."

Extension of the Farm Administration's migratory labor camp program and of the low-cost rural housing program.

Increased Federal grants to poorer States for old age assistance, and extension of social security coverage to "millions of agricultural, domestic and other workers not now included."

Insurance under social security laws for permanent and temporary disability.

Opposition to "wage cuts and false economies" among lower paid Government employes.

North Bergen, N. J., Jan 12 (AP).—A father, brooding over his health, killed his two small sons with a hatchet today, Police Chief John J. Simmen said, and then attempted suicide by lying over the open jets of a gas range in the kitchen of their home.

The father, John Behmer, 41, was under police guard at a hospital, although still unconscious.

One son, Robert, 2, died at the hospital at 8:30 a. m., about two hours after his mother, Emma, 32, awakened by his cries, found him in his crib, his face covered with blood. John, jr., 6, died two hours later. The hatchet blade was found burried in his skull.

Londoners Risk Lives To Quell Fires

Nazi Incendiaries Rain on Metropolis; One Raider Felled

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 12.—The Nazi air force made another attempt to burn London tonight, showering down high explosives and incendiaries on certain districts while scores of regular firemen and auxiliary fire service men, aided by hundreds of civilians, risked their lives to prevent the spread of flames.

Great numbers of planes passed over the city at intervals to the accompaniment of violent antiaircraft fire.

Raiders spread their operations over other parts of England, attacking a southwest town for some hours while the ground defenses tried to drive them off.

Scores Turned Back

Reports said scores of Nazi planes were turned back at the Thames Estuary and jettisoned their loads in the marshes under the heavy antiaircraft fire.

The incendiaries which dropped on one town in the Thames Estuary were reported to have done little property damage and all fires were quickly controlled.

A dozen incendiary bombs fell on houses in a town near London and were quickly extinguished. Auxiliary Territorial Service girls and volunteer watchers helped extinguish these bombs.

The raiders began coming over early in the evening while the capital was still clearing away the debris of last night's four-hour raid, which, due to the quick work of hundreds of citizens, fell in fire damage far below the big raid of December 29 and 30, when London's firemen found it impossible to cope with all the bombs.

Attack Lasts 4 Hours

Tonight's all-clear sounded after the attack, which followed a day of quiet, had lasted about four hours.

Some time after the London sirens sounded, British fighters were heard circling overhead, indicating that an R. A. F. night combat force was taking the air against the raiders.

Heavy explosions were heard at frequent intervals rumbling over the steady clatter of antiaircraft fire.

The authoritative Press Association said the Nazi invaders flew in relays over the Thames Estuary at intervals of about three minutes.

Clamor Terrific

Fire engines, sirens and antiaircraft guns in London and the outskirts set up a terrific clamor as thousands of volunteer fire watchers ran to their posts.

As the guns roared and the Nazi planes could be heard high overhead ,reports were still coming in on the extent of last night's raid on London, and people were still being dug out of the debris, some alive and some dead.

One report said eight pedestrians were killed and many injured by a bomb which fell in a London street. Eight persons were killed and many buried in a hit on a hospital and three were killed at another hospital.

As a result of last night's fire raid, there is likely to be further pressure on the government for conscription of men for air raid precaution duty, it was reported.

The Ministry of Home Security announced that more than 100,000 Londoners had answered the urgent call of Herbert Morrison, Minister of Home Security, for fire bomb fighters to man the roofs and streets, but said the total "was far short of the number required."

Morrison urged "at least one member of every family to volunteer to ensure that not a single house, office, factory or building" be left unprotected.

An Air Ministry communique said one of last night's German raiders was shot down.

boats. Our boats opened intensive and protracted gunfire in the course of which it was observed that fires developed aboard two of the enemy destroyers which were hit.

"One of our Torpedo boats was reached by a salvo of shells that brought its engines to a standstill, and later by another salvo in the ammunition depot. Accordingly, the torpedo boat sank."

The communique related that another Italian torpedo boat rushed to the rescue and saved the personnel of the sunken vessel.

Meanwhile, the high command announced British air bombers during last night heavily raided the northern industrial Italian city of Turin and the town of Savigliano, 30 miles south, with numerous explosive and incendiary bombs.

Several "residential" buildings in Turin were hit and three persons were killed and four wounded, it was stated.

British Air Defense Held Strengthened

Nazi Admission of Recent Raid Losses Deemed Significant

London, Jan. 12 (AP).—The British Press Association's air correspondent said today that Germany's admission that six planes failed to return from Friday night's raids, in which, the British claimed only two, may mean "progress is being made in the search for a thoroughly convincing answer to the night bomber."

The writer added that a scientific search was being made by the best brains of Britain for methods of locating high-flying raiders and there was reason to believe British instruments already in use are "in advance of anything yet evolved by the enemy."

Opinion varies as to the proportion of losses which any effective reply must entail. The press association's correspondent quotes one senior army expert as saying "I shall not be content until we bring down 10 per cent of all night raiders."

Experts, the correspondent added, are not overlooking the possibility that the German air force may be using sub-stratosphere raiders when lower altitudes become too hot for them.

Already against low-flying raiders the Befors gun, equipped with a new predictor, has shown itself to be an absolute "killer," scoring a hit in every 20 rounds, the correspondent said.

"There is evidence," he continued, "that concentration of fire on the estimated position of the raiders as distinct from a barrage or 'wall of fire' has proved effective. For instance, a high percentage of raiders in the later stages of the Coventry blitz were thus turned away. Incidentally rumors that the city's guns ran out of ammunition are groundless.

"Other methods tried include one in which certain 'gun zones' open up fiercely while others are strangely quiet. It is assumed that this trick is being played with the object of misleading the enemy as to his true position and to induce him to drop incendiaries in the wrong place.

"Finally it is calculated that the expenditure of British anti-aircraft shells instead of increasing as the night blitz goes into its fifth month has in fact dropped two-thirds."

Pamphlets, Bombs Rain on Turin Arsenal

British Score Hits, Drop Churchill's Indictment of Warlord

By Robert P. Post

Copyright by New York Times

London, Jan. 12.—Flying over France and the Alps, British bombers attacked the Royal Italian Arsenal at Turin Saturday night.

There were at least one big explosion and several minor ones, as big bombs whistled down on the target. The bombs were followed by showers of heavy incendiaries.

Down with the bombs went showers of pamphlets, carrying Prime Minister Winston Churchill's message to the Italian people, saying that one man only was responsible for the fact that they were at war.

The raid was accompanied by other attacks on northern Germany where the Wilhelmshaven shipyards again were bombed. Earlier and in daylight the bomber command carried out a full-dress raid on the Dutch and Belgian coasts. These raids—a new thing for the British—may be expected more regularly from now on. One explanation is that British aircraft production may be now reaching the point where they can afford to take the bigger risks involved in daylight raiding.

Day raiders during Saturday hit barges on the canal at Middel Harvis. Two hits were scored on the Zeebrugge Mole.. One plane, cruising over Domburg, spotted a detachment of German troops drilling in a barrack square. It came screaming down with its machine-guns spitting.

British pilots, on the now familiar route to Turin, found antiaircraft guns ranged along the Italian side of the Alps. Nevertheless, they began to reach their targets, one after another, about midnight.

Over the French coast the weather cleared.. It became so clear the planes did not have to fly higher over mountains. "Heaviest bombs" and incendiaries went smack into the arsenal at Turin and their explosion was followed by others. The explosions went on intermittently while fires raged.

One pilot started to make his bombing run over the arsenal, only to find that his bomb release gear had frozen up over the Alps. He went on to the Fiat factory and by the time he was there the machinery had loosened up. He saw an explosive burst on the factory and four fires spring up after he dropped his incendiaries.

Tepeleni Falls To Greeks, Say Border Reports

Italy's Whole Front In Central Albania Reported Collapsed

By the Associated Press

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, Jan. 12.—The capture by Greek soldiers of the mountain village of Tepeleni, which the Greeks claimed meant a definite break of the whole Italian front in central Albania, was reported tonight in Yugoslav border advices.

The frontier reports said that the little town fell with hardly any Fascist resistance and that the main Italian army was fleeing to the mountains northwest of Tepeleni.

The fall of Tepeleni, if verified, means the Greeks have achieved the object of a two-pronged offensive against Tepeleni and Klisura, 10 miles eastward of Tepeleni. Klisura was captured Friday.

(Tepeleni is 55 miles south of the important Fascist port of Valona, on the Adriatic Sea, and is connected with that city by a highway built by the Italians during the World War.)

(With the good road connecting Tepeleni and Valona, the Greeks apparently will use Tepeleni as a springboard for a fresh drive on Valona.)

Tepeleni commands the valleys of the Viossa, Drin and Bensa Rivers.

Italians Continue Retreat

Athens, Jan. 12 (AP).—Italian troops driven out of Klisura when the Greeks took that Albanian town Friday continued their northward retreat tonight with the Greeks in close pursuit, it was reported here.

There was no confirmation that the Greeks had captured Tepeleni, but the town's fall had been expected.

Reports from the Albanian front said Greek planes again machine-gunned the fleeing Italian column, which includes hundreds of trucks, tanks and other motorized equipment.

A captured Italian officer was reported as saying the "Italians are in a most critical situation as a result of the break in their lines at this key point."

State Economies Sought to Offset Huge Defense Bill

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—The Tax Foundation announced today that associations in 12 States would sponsor legislation to create State economy commissions for defense in an effort to "cut all nonessential expenses to the bone."

Fred A. Eldean, executive director of the foundation, which serves as a clearing house for taxpayer associations, said the action was "advocated in view of national defense expenditures which in the next few years may reach an aggregate of $50,000,000,000, added to regular Government costs."

"Government must pull in its belt on nondefense spending and it can do this by eliminating waste and extravagance," Eldean said.

States in which the foundation said taxpayer associations were cooperating in this effort were Connecticut, Florida, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, Utah, Ohio, North Dakota, Maryland, New Mexico and Tennessee.

Italy's Losses In Albania Enormous

By J. Wes Gallagher,

Associated Press Staff Writer

With Greek Troops on the Albanian Central Front, Jan. 11 (delayed)—Italy's casualties in bloody mountain fighting in Albania have been terrific—measurable, the evidence shows, only in the thousands.

This conclusion was reached after six days spent climbing slushy mountain trails thousands of feet high and walking over mile after mile of fighting ground.

No accurate accounting may be made until registration lists are checked for missing men after the war, for in the isolated brush and gorges whole patrols were wiped out and the men left where they lay—lost and forgotten in the wilderness.

Almost every foot of these awesome peaks has seen fighting.

If one stumbles off a mule trail a few feet, one is likely to blunder onto some hidden Italian machine-gun nest with gruesome, green-clad crews sprawled upon a litter of unexploded hand grenades, bayonets, packs of ammunition and explosion-torn refuse.

These nests of shallow trenches hang onto the sides of jagged peaks, cloaked in mist.

Trench mortar and machine gun positions are cunningly concealed.

The steep slopes with brush below them are laced with barbed wire. Thousands of grenades and red and black trench mortar bombs strewn for hundreds of yards speak for the abundance of Italian munitions.

The positions look impregnable but their occupants lie dead in the bright feathered caps of Alpine divisions or the brilliant insignia of other choice Italian regiments.

Somehow Greece's bearded bayonet infantry with full packs on their backs charge up the slopes on the run.

Somehow they dodge a rain of bombs poured down by hundreds of Italian aircraft.

Somehow they smash through the tangled wires and reach the trenches, machine gun nests and mortar positions which, as the hundreds of still forms mutely testify, are stubbornly defended.

Once the position is won, the Greeks snatch a hasty meal of bread and cheese and push on.

They get little rest and harass the Italians night and day.

Wrapped in blankets in snow on the windswept mountainside, they snatch a few hours sleep.

British Chase Italians From Five Air Bases

Fresh Cannon Join In Shelling Tobruk; R. A. F. Raids Palermo

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 12.—Fresh British guns hauled across the Libyan sands joined the shelling of the besieged Italian seaport base, Tobruk, tonight under the constant protection of British aviators who reported Italian planes have been chased from the five air bases in eastern Libya.

The new artillery came 70 miles from the Bardia region, where it had played a major role in softening Italian defenses for the final British-Australian attack on that captured Fascist base.

Tobruk, with a garrison believed smaller than the nearly 45,000 troops who were killed, wounded or captured in Bardia, has been caught in a ring of British steel for five days with the defenders' retreat cut off.

British military observers say now that Marshal Granziani, Italian commander in Libya, must fight in the future without his air eyes as the Royal Air Force, they declare, has seized command of the air.

An R. A. F. communique tonight told of more attacks on the Italians in Libya and a raid by the fleet air arm on Palermo, on Sicily's northern coast.

The R. A. F. said fighters maintaining a constant patrol in eastern Libya reported "Derna, Martuba, El Tmimi and El Gazala were all clear of enemy aircraft except for a considerable number that were unserviceable" and that the Bomba seaplane base, between Tobruk and Derna, "appears to have been abandoned by the enemy."

"Twenty burned out aircraft were reported as abandoned on the Galaza landing ground," the communique said.

In the Palermo said, the R. A. F. reported, shipping was the main objective.

"The bomb fell very close to a merchant vessel of about 8,000 tons," it said. "Of 12 ships along the outer mole, one received a direct hit and four others were believed to have been damaged. Fires and explosions were caused among warehouses."

The R. A. F. also raided Benina and Berka airdromes again and told of bombs straddling buildings, "causing large fires and a number of explosions near dispersed aircraft."

Other aircraft raided Bengasi, capital of Cirenaica, and, the British said, "one heavy bomb hit a large building of military importance. Fires were started on the jetty and shipping was believed to have been badly damaged."

The Caproni workships and gasoline dumps were bombed in another raid on Mai Adaga, Italian East Africa, the communique said. It also reported air attacks on Berbera, Somaliland, captured by the Italians last summer, and the Jiga-Jiga landing ground.

From these widespread operations, the British added, all planes returned safely.

The Jerabub Oasis, 150 miles due south of Bardia and near the Egyptian border, was reported cut off from the remainder of the Fascist forces in Libya. Military sources said it was only a question of time before it would fall.

The Italian garrison there was believed to be less than a brigade.

The oasis contains buildings and relics sacred to the Senussi sect of Moslems. The British thus far have refrained from bombing it.

Mine Strike Off If 2 Get Back Jobs

Uniontown, Pa., Jan. 12 (AP).—Approximately 1,600 coal diggers on strike at two Republic Steel Corporation mines near Clarksville, Greene County, today voted unanimously to return to work Tuesday if the company also put back to work two miners it had disciplined on charges of disobeying safety rules.

A company spokesman said tonight that the two men involved had been given slips to report to the mine foreman and talk over safety regulations but failed to carry out the order.

Warner Brothers Lead In Defense Cooperation

All Theaters to Display Emblematic Plaques; Two More Subscription Plays for the National; This, That and the Other About the Theater

A SPECIAL PLAQUE will be posted on the box-offices of all the Warner Brothers theaters in the near future to signify that these motion picture houses are wholeheartedly supporting the national defense effort, according to a late bulletin from Zone Manager John J. Payette.

BELL

These plaques should be a source of pride to each theater. The Warner chain is the first to sign up with the Motion Picture Committee of the National Defense Group and will be the first to declare by this visible symbol that the organization is enthusiastically in sympathy with the preparedness effort.

No theater or group of theaters will receive this emblem of cooperation unless the owners or operators "have agreed to cooperate with the defense efforts being made by the motion picture industry."

Incidentally, this preeminence in a vital movement seems to have been "in the bag" for the Freres Warner enterprises, since Joseph Bernhard, general manager of all the Warner theaters, heads the national motion picture committee. He has set a shining example for the rest of the industry.

In case anyone has been fretting about what the Warners may have in mind for the forthcoming year, it has just been officially announced that their 1941 production schedule will be based upon 25 story properties, "worth considerably more than $1,000,000"—six plays, 12 novels and seven original stories. The plays are "The Man Who Came to Dinner," in which Alexander Woollcott will be seen later on the stage of the National; "The Male Animal," also an early National booking; "The Gentle People," the January 31 production of the Washington Theater (formerly the Civic); "George Washington Slept Here"—which seems highly probable—"Caesar's Wife" and "The Desert Song." The novels and published fiction include, "King's Row," "Quietly My Captain Waits," "One Foot in Heaven," "Captain Horatio Hornblower," "The Constant Nymph," "Jonas-Ma," which was "Out of Gas," as a magazine story; "Mr. Skeffington," "Elizabeth," "Danger Signal" "House on the Hill," "Happiness" and "Panama Canal." Original stories: "They Died With Their Boots On," "The Widow Wouldn't Weep," "Navy Blues," "Sergeant York," "Capt. Ulysses Smith," "The Man Who Couldn't Kill" and "John Paul Jones." Wanna make anything of it?

He and Nelson Eddy will represent M.-G.-M. And among those who will lend something or other to the President's Birthday Celebrations, will be "long, lean, lanky," not to mention blonde, Charlotte Greenwood, whose most recent convulsing cavortings were in "Down Argentine Way" and Technicolor. To name all the other handsome things she's done on both stage and screen would be to write a book.*

And speaking of those Aloha Girls. . . . Well, anyhow.

Gertrude Lawrence will display her varied talents as singer, dancer and emotional actress in "Lady in the Dark," the whatsis by Moss Hart, Kurt Weill and Ira Gershwin, opening in the Alvin Theater, New York, on Thursday night. Subscribers to the Theater Guild-American Theater Society season at the National will receive their tickets for two subscription plays in the near future—"The Male Animal," with Elliott Nugent and the original Broadway cast, due February 3, and Saroyan's long-awaited Pulitzer Prize play, "The Time of Your Life," with Eddie Dowling and Julie Haydon, one week later. These will be Nos. 3 and 4 on the list of six. The fifth will be "Twelfth Night," costarring Helen Hayes and Maurice Evans, with something to take the place of "Battle of Angels" dropping into the last hole. So now you know. As nearly as anybody does, that is.

President's Speech Tops Trans-Lux Bill

News Section Covers World, With Varied Short Reels Added

At the Trans-Lux Theater this week Paramount's complete and altogether splendid recording of the President's historic report on the state of the Nation leads off the news pictorials.

It is followed by the latest crop of war flashes, which include shots of Britain's continued offensive in Libya with spectacular views of an attack on an Italian airdrome. In England, tank and collapsible boat maneuvers presage a not far off offensive; at a Greek-English luncheon, Lord Halifax pays verbal tribute to the Greeks; Lloyd George's daughter leads in a campaign to gather scrap iron for war needs; American volunteers open a recreation club, and Gen. De Gaulle inspects the French fleet in London waters.

On Home Front

At home, or in the Western Hemisphere, Harry Hopkins leaves by Clipper to prepresent the President inn England; Brazil launched a new destroyer; Marines stationed at San Diego go into action, and we train a ski Arctic patrol at Lake Placid.

In the sports events, Johnny Bulla wins the Los Angeles Golf Open Tourney; the Boston Boys Club holds boxing bouts that are a lot of fun, and Budge, Tilden and Marble are seen in sensational tennis matches.

"Beautiful Ball," a travelog, is true to its name; "Quail Quest," for hunters, doesn't disappoint; "Picture People" presents movie stars somewhat differently; "Problem Pappy," a Popeye cartoon, is exciting and funny; and for extra measure, "The Girl on the Magazine Cover," about beautiful young models and their job, pleases the eye, and is both informing and highly amusing.

'Best Leading Lady' Laugh for Morgan

Frank Morgan, on the "Wild Man of Borneo" set, received an old program inscribed by Walter Catlett to "The best leading lady I ever had."

They are together for the first time since in "Wild Man of Borneo."

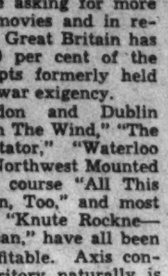
Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Jan. 12 (INS).—Y. Frank Freeman showed me photographs of crowds going into London theaters to see "Northwest Mounted Police" during an air raid. Both he and I wondered if it could be true that Londoners forget their danger and concentrate on movies during a bombing siege. Yet England and Sweden are asking for more American movies and in recent weeks Great Britain has released 50 per cent of the gross receipts formerly held because of war exigency.



PARSONS

In London and Dublin "Gone With The Wind," "The Great Dictator," "Waterloo Bridge," "Northwest Mounted Police," of course "All This and Heaven, Too," and most surprising, "Knute Rockne—All American," have all been highly profitable. Axis controlled territory naturally is another story. Germany has banned all American pictures from occupied France, Denmark, Norway, Poland and Germany. Strangely enough, Hitler's ally, Mussolini, has not officially banned American movies, but it has always been so difficult to get money out of Italy that this market means little.

Those who knew Rudolph Valentino will agree with me there can never be another and that any studio that attempts to create a similar Latin lover, is doomed to disappointment. However Twentieth Century-Fox believes that Tyrone Power has an Irish charm that is equally potent and so they are trying to buy "The Sheik," Valentino's best known picture. Ty is now making "Blood and Sand" which was also one of Rudy's successes. But that doesn't mean that Twentieth is trying to turn him into a Valentino, because that just couldn't be done—the types are too different.

Jack Oakie has been a bad boy at various times in his career—but no one has won more admiration than he has for the way he has been devotion itself to Venita, his wife, during her long illness. Jack seems to have turned over a new leaf—and while you couldn't give him away a year ago, he's hotter than a firecracker now after "The Great Dictator" and "Tin Pan Alley." A month ago Twentieth put him under contract for three pictures—but that isn't keeping Oakie from roving over to Warners to make "Navy Blues" with Eddie Albert for Hal Wallis. It should be a hit with these two comedians—and in case you haven't guessed, it's an enlistment comedy with Jack and Eddie going to town as novice gobs.

Stirling Hayden's name may be new to you—but it won't be for long. He never saw a camera until six months ago—then presto, he almost walks away with "Virginia." In fact, Stirling did so well with the critics after the preview that today Para announced they were costarring him with Virginia Dale in "Little Miss Muffett." Young Hayden, they tell me, is something of an American Errol Flynn. He's only 24-years-old, but he's gone in for the adventurous life on a big scale.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Gayety

"Naughty Nifties," the most entertaining revue to play here in several seasons, opened a week's engagement at the Gayety Theater yesterday afternoon.

There is nothing in particular, but everything in general, which makes the current bill such a smashing hit. The comedians are both funny and original; the girls are lovely to look at and the music and settings among the most lavish Maestro Ferber has offered to date.

If you're a fan who likes his comedy, look no farther than the newcomer, Charlie Kemper, and his copartner, George Haggerty. Making their initial appearance at this house, these two funsters are the funniest comedians we've seen at the Gayety in recent years. Adding to the mirth and merriment are Dick Richards and Harry "Shuffles" LeVan, two amusing chaps in their own right. Richards all but "stops" the performance with his comedy "strip-tease," while LeVan's dance routine is a wow.

Marlane, a tall and lovely blonde beauty from Texas, is an "added attraction," while Ann Smith, Betty Smith, Kay Austin and Beth Calvert prove a foursome who have much to offer in the song-and-dance line. Particularly good are Beth Calvert's song offerings and Miss Austin's acrobatic dancing.

Completing an exceptionally fine cast are Jess Mack, one of the circuit's best and most versatile performers; Jack Davis, singer, and a line of pretty and shapely gals who show evidence of careful training in their colorful and well-executed musical specialties. ART JOHN.

In Hollywood

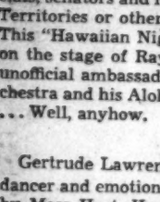
—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Jan. 12.

I love the story of Joe Mankiewicz, producer of "Philadelphia Story," who knew he had a honey, but he'd been given some pretty poor pictures to do, and his salary as a producer was a little too high for the things he had been turning out.



HOPPER

So he went to the big boss at Metro, knowing "Philadelphia Story" would be one of the smash hits of the year, and said, "I think you're paying me too much salary—I'm willing to take a cut." 'Twas a red letter day in the bosom of that studio. Here was a man who had humanity, great feeling, and loyalty to his chief, who had given him an opportunity—and he was voluntarily reducing his salary. So Joe emerged with a five-year straight contract, without layoff or options, at $3,000 a week.

I'd like to tell you a little story about George Raft. Some years ago, beautiful Veda Ann Borg was in a terrific automobile accident, her face scarred. In two years she's had seven plastic operations, suffered intense pain. She and her mother had a frightful time paying expenses.

George had met her once on a picture in which he was working, and during those two years he was the only person in Hollywood who remembered to telephone and cheer her up with flowers. She's now, I'm happy to say, playing opposite Eddie Arnold in "Roosty."

Edward Ellis is busy at Republic in "Citadel of Crime" with John Wayne and Frances Dee . . . ASCAP war is so all-embracing you can't even mention the name of one of their songs over the networks.

Millionaire Atwater Kent, who contributed so much to radio, won't allow the pesky things in his house. He's just bought the beautiful Bell estate on the tip-top of Bel Air, which was built by Daisy Danziger, who later became Mrs. Tony Moreno. Kent got the greatest bargain of the past 20 years. Nice to know he'll be a resident here at least three months a year.

When Woody Van Dyke, a major in the Marine Corps Reserves, received his first letter from President Roosevelt, addressed "Dear Woody," he took it over to Son Jimmy and said, "Don't you think this is pretty fresh of your father, when I address his as 'Chief?'"

Woody swears we'll be in war 60 or 90 days hence. While we like Woody, we think he ought to be a little bit more careful, especially when he's in uniform. That incident which happened at Chasen's the other night, when Woody swung on Leo McCarey, which was intercepted by Dave Butler, was not a pretty sight to see. If the blow had landed, it would have done Leo irreparable harm, because since that automobile smash-up of his, he has several wires in his face. Woody didn't approve of a mild criticism Leo voiced, not to him but to Dave Butler.

They had to shoot Dorothy Comingore's scenes in "Citizen Kane" behind sofas because she was developing motherhood. And even the stork beat Orson Welles. Her baby arrived a few days ago. "Citizen Kane" won't be released till Washington's Birthday, if then.

Margaret Sullavan's third baby is expected end of February and she's just finished "Back Street." You know, some girls have the gift for this sort of thing.

We're thinking of starting a new club in Hollywood, called "The Uninvited Club." But I'm telling you now, you'll have to have an invitation to get in.

District Court Goes Deeper In Docket Jam

Pending Cases Increase; Only Remedy Held Long Hours for Judges

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

While the District Court was disposing of 953 of its accumulated cases in the past six months, 2,134 new cases were filed with the clerk.

New attention was directed to the state of the court's docket by this report of performance, announced by Justice Oscar R. Luhring, pretrial and assignment justice.

The report, prepared by Assignment Commissioner John H. Sullivan, showed that last June 30 there were pending 932 jury cases and 1,612 cases to be tried by the judges.

As the year ended, 1,591 of these were still awaiting disposition. The last jury case, it is expected, will not be out of the way for 16 months. The last nonjury case will be handled in about a year. However long it takes, not until the last one of these cases has been decided can the first case filed last July 1 claim its place on the docket.

Important to Litigants

The cases thus delayed in this city's court of general jurisdiction are more than mere raw material for statistics. To thousands of citizens they mean determinations of vital importance. The damage suits on the one hand involve the rights of people injured in accidents, on the other the credit of the defendants, whose liability ought to be determined and settled. The contract cases generally involve the rights of creditors, whose bills are unpaid. In like manner, the divorce, patent, probate and insurance litigation is vital to the people concerned.

On June 30, the "lag" from the time a jury case was ready for trial and the time it was tried was 18 months. When the year ended this "lag" had been decreased by two months. But the "lag" for nonjury cases increased in this period from 11 to 12 months.

Justice Luhring said comparison of the 1940 report with the comparable figures for 1939 showed a loss in performance for all categories of cases except uncontested divorce.

The court disposed of 409 jury cases in 1939 and only 261 in the last six months of 1940, of 532 contested nonjury cases in 1939 and 347 in 1940. The number of uncontested divorces handled rose from 109 in 1939 to 345 in 1940.

The court was in full session only three of the last six months in 1940 and throughout that period lacked the services of one justice, sometimes more. This was true also in 1939.

Justice Luhring said the effective use of the pretrial hearings—where cases are simplified and often settled before trial—had helped the court's performance. But he said that pretrial procedure could not be expected to do all the work of clearing up the docket. There was little profit, he said, in getting cases ready for expeditious handling unless the handling could then be done.

The prospect for the next six months, said Justice Luhring, is far from encouraging, because of handicaps under which the court must operate.

Justice Peyton Gordon has been away from the bench since last spring and his illness and advanced age make it unlikely that he will resume regular duty. His forthcoming retirement was reported months ago.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts, who has shared the burden of keeping abreast of the heavy criminal docket with Justice James W. Morris, will be obliged to take leave shortly for a long-deferred eye operation.

Faces Long Trust Trial

Justice James M. Proctor is expected to be occupied for months with the trial of antitrust charges against the American Medical Association. Two other judges, Justice Luhring said, are likely to be needed to handle criminal sessions, the only part of the court where business is up to date.

Justice Luhring said that these factors accounted for 5 of the 12 justices. Justice T. Alan Goldsborough will be fully occupied with the motions division, where hundreds of small but important questions have to be threshed out every week, as part of the business of getting cases ready for trial. Justice Luhring himself is busy with his pretrial and assignment duties.

Thus only five justices actually are available to handle the court's heavy and growing civil business. And of these five, the aged chief justice, Alfred A. Wheat, is generally occupied with condemnation cases, in which juries decide how much the Government shall pay for land taken for public purposes.

Pointing out the long hours kept by some of the justices, members of the bar have declared that the only way to clear up the docket is for the remaining members of the bench to keep similar hours and work also on Saturdays until the long-standing jam is cleared up.

Lend-Lease Means War, Wheeler Says

U. S. Is Already In, Agar Retorts Before 500 at Radio Forum

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, declared last night that approval of the lend-lease bill "means war—open and complete warfare."

The statement, made on Theodore Granik's "American Forum of the Air" Nation-wide broadcast from the Willard Hotel, brought the retort from Herbert Agar, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, that:

"We are already at war . . . in a world revolution . . . We are having a war waged against us."

The theory that "this is our war," declared Edward T. Flynn, economist and newspaper columnist, "is not only false but a deliberate invention of the British propaganda department."

Lee Quotes Hitler

Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said "Germany is out to conquer the world," and he quoted Hitler and other Nazi leaders as proof.

The intensity of the debate and the reaction of more than 500 Washingtonians who crowded the Willard Room to hear it gave an indication of how deep the Nation's feeling runs on the question of isolation vs. intervention.

Hecklers frequently interrupted speakers, and throughout the debate there were boos, hisses, catcalls, applause and cheers.

At one point Senator Lee asked for "a little better sportsmanship on the part of the audience."

Flynn Replies to Heckler

And Flynn, interrupted while he was saying that Hitler would need an army of a "preposterous" size to conquer the United States, took heed of a cry that "they're here already" by saying:

"The lady says they're here already. In other words she intimates there are enough spies already here to conquer 130,000,000 people!"

Wheeler described the lend-lease program as "the New Deal's Triple A foreign policy—It will plow under every fourth American boy."

"Never before," he declared, "have the American people been asked or compelled to give so bounteously and so completely of their tax dollars to any foreign nation. Never before has the Congress of the United States been asked by any President to violate international law. Never before has this Nation resorted to duplicity in the conduct of its foreign affairs.

Warns of Dictatorship

"Never before has the United States given to one man the power to strip this Nation of its defenses. Never before has the Congress coldly and flatly been asked to abdicate.

"If the American people want a dictatorship—if they want a totalitarian form of government and if they want war—this bill should be steam rollered through Congress—as is the wont of President Roosevelt."

Agar called for quick passage of the bill with "no fooling around by Senators who think they have a mission from God to prevent the people from getting the action which the people crave."

Wheeler, Ingersoll Debate

Senator Wheeler said yesterday afternoon that regardless of the outcome of the European war "America can continue its free existence if it can solve its own economic problems."

He and Ralph Ingersoll, editor of the New York newspaper PM, spoke from Washington on the University of Chicago Round Table broadcast.

With the help of this country, declared Ingersoll, England can win the war against a Germany that "now is like concrete that has not yet set." He said "British bombs may destroy it before it becomes solidified."

Ships Axis Called 'Idle' Still Aid Allies, Say Hollanders

Statement Issued by Legation Here Denies Report That Merchant Fleet Of 500 Craft Lies at Anchor in U. S. Ports

The Netherlands Legation revealed last night that 500 Dutch merchantmen, manned by 50,000 undaunted seamen, are still actively plying the seven seas, carrying arms to Britain and other goods to Holland's overseas possessions.

The disclosure came in a statement to the press denying "rumors which emanate chiefly from quarters hostile to the Allied cause" that Dutch merchant ships are lying idle in American ports.

Netherlands merchant shipping, the statement said, has not "been frightened from the high seas because Holland in Europe now is occupied by the enemy." The crews of Dutch ships are carrying on "their perilous duties," it was added, "although completely severed from their families in the homeland, who are exposed to the hardships of the German occupation."

Since the German attack upon Holland on May 10, 1940, the Netherlands' merchant fleet of 2,500,000 tons, the world's seventh largest, has been "dedicated to the service of the Allied powers," the statement declared. It continued:

"Part of the fleet has been placed at the disposal of the British Ministry of Shipping and transports American armaments to Britain. Part is plying between the United States and the Netherlands overseas territories in Asia and the Caribbean.

"The ratio of the vessels placed at the disposal of the British Ministry of Shipping has been fixed by an agreement between the Netherlands and British governments."

Legation officials said they did not know the ratio, but they emphasized that their merchant fleet is contributing "a great deal" to the Allied cause and declared that "there is not a single Netherlands ship laid up in a United States port."

Catholic Leader Here Calls For War on 'False Philosophies'

High U. S. Officials Attending Red Mass At C. U. Hear Archbishop Mitty Assail Threats Upon American Institutions

A battle against "false philosophies within our borders" was urged yesterday at Catholic University's third annual Red Mass by the Most Rev. John J. Mitty, Archbishop of San Francisco.

Men high in the ranks of several nations besides the United States joined in a service traditionally linked with the opening of European legislative halls and courts. They heard the Catholic leader warn:

"We may and should become deeply apprehensive of the attacks which are being made by current false philosophies of life which indirectly attack the true basis of our constitutional rights, the dignity and inviolability of the human personality."

He declared that "attacks upon the sacredness of marriage, unauthorized legal attacks upon the individual's right to bodily integrity and the family's authority are examples of the false thinking which have had practical results in law."

"The shifting of responsibility for religious and moral training from the family to government, the decline of respect for lawful authority, group selfishness, the weakening of courage in public officers whose duty is leadership—all of these numerous assaults combine in a formdiable attack upon the Christian philosophy of life and constitute a threat to the true functioning of government and law."

Earlier Archbishop Mitty, in describing how the purpose of the Red Mass is to invoke the blessing of the Holy Spirit upon the "labors of statesmanship," said:

"Surely today, more than ever before, you who have been entrusted with the noble dignity and heavy responsibilities of conceiving and enacting legislation, and administering justice, need help from God in determining the ultimate path of American law for the present and future generations to come."

Archbishop Mitty, who spoke near a red carnation and iris-adorned altar in the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, earlier joined with religious and lay leaders of the university in an opening procession.

They included the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, Bishop of Bilta and university rector; the Very Rev. Robert J. White, law school dean and mass celebrant; the Rev. John P. Maher, O. S. A., and the Rev. John F. Galloway, O. S. A., both of the university's Augustinian college, deacon and subdeacon of the mass; the Rev. William J. Lallou, of the school of theology, master of ceremonies, and the Rev. Walter J. Schmitz, S. S., assistant master of ceremonies.

Chaplains to Bishop Corrigan and Archbishop Mitty were, respectively, the Rev. John J. Reilly, director of the shrine, and the Rev. Edward Dowd, professor of religious education of the university, and the Rev. William McDonald and the Rev. Martin Higgins, of San Francisco.

Law school students, serving as ushers, escorted the distinguished guests to their places as they entered the shrine through a long purple marquee.

They included Supreme Court Justices Harlan F. Stone, Frank Murphy, Owen W. Roberts and William O. Douglas; Postmaster General and Mrs. Frank G. Walker; A. A. Berle, Assistant Secretary of State; Francis W. Hill, jr., president of the D. C. Bar Association; Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, Edward M. Curran, United States District Attorney.

The Right Rev. William R. Arnold, Army chief of chaplains; Capt. Robert D. Workman, Navy chief of chaplains; the Turkish Ambassador, Mehmet M. Ertegun; the Minister of Eire and Mrs. Robert Brennan, Senator Theodore Bilbo (Democrat), of Mississippi; Dennis Chavez (Democrat), of New Mexico; George L. Radcliffe (Democrat), of Maryland, and many others.

A reception and dinner for visiting priests and others were held in Curley Hall after the mass.

Defective Machine Blamed for Mine Blast Killing 31

The Bureau of Mines today blamed ignition of gas from a mining machine or electric drill for the Nelms coal mine explosion near Cadiz, Ohio, on November 29, in which 31 men were killed.

The mining machine and the electric drill were in a condition considered "nonpermissible" by Bureau standards, due to the fact that numerous bolts were missing, officials said.

The bureau also reported that ventilation was not sufficient to clear dangerous accumulations of gas, and said that this situation was likely to be aggravated by carelessness in failing to keep ventilation doors closed. It said, however, that the Nelms mine "operated with a higher regard for safety than the average coal mine."

Licaro, of 1717 G Street Northwest; Samuel Petresky, of 1815 H Street Northwest, and Clarence G. Pelkey, of 2025 I Street Northwest.

Forty-four other Washingtonians, all colored, will be inducted Friday.

The Selective Service Board, meanwhile, announced that the chairman and chief clerks of the District's 25 local Draft Boards will hold a dinner at the Mayflower Hotel January 22. President Roosevelt, Selective Service Director Clarence A. Dykstra, former Senator Edward R. Burke and Representative James W. Wadsworth have been invited.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox will address the dinner, which will be held at 7 p. m. in the Chinese room.

Opposes 'Dry Zones'

Selective Service officials yesterday were sent a statement by Capt. W. H. Stayton, executive director of Repeal Associates and a leader of the fight against the Eighteenth Amendment, who opposed local prohibition or the establishment of "dry zones" around training camps.

Capt. Stayton declared that defense preparations would be retarded by the creation of dry zones. He said such a move would "present a bonanza to the bootleggers of the country" and urged the organization of local citizens' committees to cooperate with enforcement officials in remedying "evil conditions" around camps.

120 Aliens Given Stays Of Deportation

Eviction Would Mean Hardship For Relatives Here

Attorney General Robert H. Jackson announced yesterday that he had suspended deportation of 120 aliens for six months because investigation revealed their deportation would result in serious hardship to relatives here.

At the same time the Justice Department announced that its preliminary figures shows that 4,741,971 aliens had registered in continental United States during the four-month period provided by the law.

In his statement, Jackson pointed out that in each case of suspended deportation, a thorough investigation had been made, that each of these aliens has proved to be of good moral character during the past five years, and that they were deportatable "for technical reasons only."

Jackson said that full files on the cases have been set apart in the offices of the Immigration and Naturalization Service to be immediately available to any member of Congress, as provided in the Alien Registration Act. Congress, through a concurrent resolution, can order the deportation to be carried out.

Earl G. Harrison, director of alien registration, in releasing statistics yesterday, pointed out that registrations with American consular offices abroad, alien seamen permitted ashore, and in Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands reach a total of 4,912,817 aliens for the United States and its possessions.

He emphasized that all present figures are preliminary, except totals to be determined by a machine count "some time this spring."

While postoffices are continuing for a time to accept registrations, this is not to be construed as an extension of the statutory period, the director said.

"We are merely permitting postoffices to take the registrations, together with an explanation for the delay. In most instances, these explanations indicate rather clearly that the omission was not willful."

Battle Of Tax-Exempts

The battle over taxation of income from Federal, State and municipal bonds has begun once more. From the Treasury came the opening shot in the form of a release to the press "in connection with Secretary Morgenthau's effort to eliminate the further issuance of tax-exempt securities." This brought a sharp response from the Conference on State Defense accusing the Treasury of issuing "misinforming and misleading" statements. Thus the promise of a cooperative approach held out by the Treasury a month ago is still far from fruition.

Secretary Morgenthau's recent statement showed that a total of $54,800,000,000 in securities wholly or partly tax-exempt were in the hands of the public at the close of the fiscal year 1940. Only 28 per cent of this sum represents the issues of State and local governments. In other words, the great bulk of the tax-exempt bonds and notes now held by the public has been issued by the Federal Government and its agencies.

In elaborating this fact the Conference on State Defense denies that "State and municipal bonds are instruments of wholesale tax evasion." It insists that only a "very small number of persons" obtain any tax advantage through the purchase of Sate and city bonds. "Why," the conference asks, "is it proposed to burn down the entire edifice of Federal-State relations in order to catch a small batch of mice?" The statement winds up with a direct request to the Treasury to "confine its policies to its own bonds and leave to the States and cities the determination of their own fiscal policies."

This verbal clash between the Treasury and local officials is particularly unfortunate because of the olive branch held out to the States in the President's budget message. He urged "a thorough investigation of the possibilities of a comprehensive tax reform" extending to the Federal-State-local fiscal relationship. In the meantime he proposed that "we make all possible progress in improving the Federal tax system." This language implies that he has abandoned all thought of attempting to tax income from State and city bonds by act of Congress alone. Indeed, Secretary Morgenthau gave the same impression when he recently announced that he will ask Congress for power to make income from all future Federal bonds subject to taxation. And Treasury officials forecast that this long step forward would be followed by negotiations designed to bring about comparable action by the States.

Congress could permit taxation of income from Federal bonds by any State reciprocally permitting Federal taxation of income from its issues. The privilege of collecting revenue from the holders of the large volume of defense bonds to be issued in the next few years should be a real inducement to some States to enter into such an arrangement. It is true that only about half of the States have income taxes, and Federal bonds are concentrated in the wealthier States. But even if only a few of the States were induced by this method to give up the issuance of tax-exempt bonds, a vexing problem would be largely solved. Certainly this approach offers more hope of accomplishment than resumption of the lost fight to impose Federal taxes on income from local securities by act of Congress alone.

A Great Name

In the two months or so since Mussolini began his ill-destined Graeco-Albanian campaign, Gen. Metaxas has undergone a curious metamorphosis in English and American minds. As the mere dictator of a small nation his fame was obscured by the macabre figures of Hitler, Mussolini, Stalin and Franco, who loomed so much larger in the imagination of the world. But now, as the champion of freedom, as the inspirer of the courage and discipline which have enabled the Greeks, in an amazing succession of victories, not only to repel a force much more formidable than their own, but even to enter deep into enemy territory, Metaxas has become in the eyes of the democratic world a hero second only to Churchill himself.

More than once a general named John has appeared in the role of unexpected deliverer of Europe. It was Don Juan of Austria, for example, who, in 1571 destroyed the Ottoman fleet at Lepanto and so saved the Western Mediterranean world from extinction. On his tomb in the Escorial is inscribed the verse: "There was a man sent from God whose name was John." A hundred and twelve years after Lepanto the same words were spoken of John Sobieski, of Poland, who with his army appeared suddenly, and it was thought miraculously, outside Vienna to turn away the Turks from the very gates.

Lend-Lease Vision

There is no doubt that the British should be asked to post the bulk of their remaining dollar holdings against materials to be supplied out of our arsenal. The lend-lease bill is unclear on this point. But it would be foolish in our own interest to try to strip Britain of her overseas investment. There are many values which we can obtain from Britain which would be worth far more to us as a nation than the dollars represented by Britain's financial possessions in this continent.

Mr. Mellon at the height of the war debt debate provided a key to any discussion on the new Anglo-American financial arrangements. He said that a good customer in Europe was worth far more in dollars and cents than all the war debts put together. At the time nobody paid much attention to Mr. Mellon. The result was, to say the least, painful. In order to win back markets in the impoverished post-war world, we had to put new funds into the hands of our European customers. Germany, especially, borrowed a fabulous sum. And the bonds representing those borrowings are today locked away in many an American safe deposit box, though without hope of redemption. In other words, we lost out both on war debts and on the subsequent loans which we made to move our surpluses.

After this war we shall be just as zealous in seeking new markets and in trying to revive old markets. Are we going to repeat the same experience? Are we going actually to help in intensifying the impoverishment in Europe which might be our outstanding problem as well as theirs? These questions deserve just as much consideration among our legislators as the means for insuring a Nazi defeat. It is incumbent upon them as statesmen to take note of what is possible through the lend-lease bill to cushion the shocks to us and the world in general of post-war readjustment.

There are many methods of obtaining values which would serve the dual purpose of prosecuting the war and saving the peace. In recent weeks we have mentioned a number of them. Here is another: let us use the portion of Britain's overseas assets easy of liquidation to buy up surplus world stocks of foodstuffs and materials which will be necessary to put post-war Europe back on its feet. There will be famine to avert, revolutions to stave off, disease to combat, devastation to repair. Stockpiles of the needed commodities, bought with British money, might thus be more worthwhile to us and the entire world than any other asset. The advantages would be apparent as soon as the plan were adopted and they would grow in geometrical ratio. Let us list them:

1. The plan would keep afloat primary producers throughout the world who are now languishing as a result of wartime lack of markets. Already we are sustaining some of these primary producers in this continent with loans.

2. It would help in the blockade of Nazi Germany—in which, no doubt, we shall soon find ourselves engaged, positively as well as negatively—by enabling us to preempt world markets still available to the Nazis.

3. It would encourage passive resistance in the captive countries, if not a throwing off of their chains. They would obtain a new view of our resoluteness, and an assurance that they aren't being forgotten. New hope would come to them of abundance on the very morrow of their liberation. Already Mr. Hoover is seeking to mobilize America's charitable resources in behalf of these captive nations.

4. It would insure a smooth post-war adjustment when the economies of the world have been demobilized.

The times call for statesmanship based upon imagination and vision lest the last state of the world, ours as well as theirs, shall be worse than the first. Statesmanship is based upon profiting from experience, and the greatest error of statesmen, according to Lord Salisbury, is to cling to the carcases of dead policies. We got largely worthless paper out of the last war, we are getting gold nowadays in the mistaken belief that we are getting full value, and some of the legislators on the Hill are talking of getting other assets which even if capable of safe and easy mobilization, may prove wasting. Under our plan we should be getting real values, and, perhaps, the new world envisioned by Mr. Roosevelt.

Rival Arsenals

To what an extent Russia will be able and willing to live up to her pledge of increased shipments of "industrial raw materials, oil products and foodstuffs, especially cereals," to cite the text of the new Nazi-Soviet agreement, is far from clear. Unfulfilled were the high hopes of an endless flow of supplies from Russia which were forecast as the result of the earlier Russo-German trade agreement. And, even with the greatest goodwill on the part of the Kremlin, it is a real question whether transportation difficulties, which have impeded traffic between Russia and the Reich hitherto, can now be overcome to make large-scale shipments possible between the two countries.

Nonetheless the importance of the latest Russo-German agreement cannot safely be minimized. It should end that species of wishful thinking created by the hope that Stalin would enter the lists against Hitler. The fact is apparent that Russia, whatever her suspicions of Germany's ultimate ambitions, is placing herself at Germany's disposal as a supplier of that nation. At the same time, the suspicion exists that she is also not averse to serving the Reich as a middleman through whom Hitler will be able to get raw materials which Germany desperately needs and which can only be procured from overseas.

In 1940, for instance, shipments of American copper to Russia were very much greater than in 1939. The figures lend weight to the feeling that this vital commodity is being imported for transshipment to Germany. In this connection there may be more than a coincidence that on the day following the signing of the Russo-German pact President Roosevelt extended the licensing system to exports of copper and nickel. At a time when we are straining every nerve to serve as the "arsenal of the democracies," it is plain common sense to avoid being, at the same time, the arsenal of the dictatorships.

On Loitering

Last week in New York an aged Jewish cobbler was arrested for the crime of "loitering" in a public park. The prisoner was taken before a magistrate to whom, being unacquainted with English, he was unable to explain that he was no loiterer but a respectable and industrious man. The magistrate sentenced him to ten days. Happily, however, the cobbler, though poor, was not without friends. These were able to raise enough fuss to obtain his release, and the editor of the New York Times even wrote an indignant editorial about the case.

Now "loitering" is variously defined nowadays as merely wasting time, or as behaving in an indolent manner, or as traveling in some especially lackadaisical fashion. In these senses it would probably include such practices as gazing vacuously out of club windows and watching excavations and suspender demonstrations in drug store windows and driving through New York's Central Park in a hansom cab. But even in New York people are rarely put in jail for these forms of loitering.

The word itself seems to have evolved from a Dutch root, meaning "to wag like a loose tooth," which sounds like a very neat trick for those who can do it. But in the New York police courts "loitering" is evidently synonymous with "vagrancy." This seems to be harking back to a sixteenth century English usage. Tudor England, if you remember, was much infested with vagabonds or "sturdy beggars;" that is to say, with persons who had been deprived of livelihood by the growth of the great manorial establishments and the enclosure of the common lands. These wretched folk, it seems, are referred to in some contemporary writings as "lousey, lewd leuterers."

How can anybody, even a policeman, tell whether a person who seems to loiter is really loitering? Such a person, for all the cop could know to the contrary, might be be in a very fever of creative activity. He might, for example, be composing a great poem in dactylic hexameters. Or he might be working out a new theory of time and space. He might even be saying his prayers. But suppose that the loitering is the real thing, rather than just a matter of being old and feeble as in the case of the cobbler, or of being caught in a cruel enchantment? Even so there is much to be said for it. The loiterer takes in a great deal that is utterly lost on the citizen who goes briskly about his lawful occasions. For instance:

> The loitering traveler hence at evening sees
> From rock-hewn steps the sail beneath the trees,

We could go on and on citing instances like this in defense of loitering.

But perhaps we had better stop before we get arrested for loitering ourselves, or at least for obstructing traffic to matters of great pith and moment.

Oh long had stood the empty hall
Where lowly ones and great
Tried out the horn upon the wall—
The magic horn that none could sound
But one, the master of the hound
That slept beside the gate

(No lord looked he, who poor and lame
Drew down the trumpet from its hook
And set it to his lips that shook

The sleeping hound was called awake;
Green corn-blades pierced the loam,
And swans swam on the silver lake.
The castle thrilled from roof to ground

War No "Act of God"

A great deal has been written in this column pro and con concerning capitalism and communism, but so far the relationship between war and capitalism has not been clearly defined. It is obvious that war is not an act of God. Rather, is it an outgrowth of a system which must be constantly expanding because the workers cannot buy back all that they produce, thus creating a "surplus."

Therefore, surplus goods must be sold in foreign markets. As a result of the clamor for bigger and better profits we see a situation similar to that of a family of pigs all trying to get to the trough at once. When the scramble becomes too intense it is necessary to eliminate some of the pigs so that the biggest ones may hog the market. War becomes the best means toward this end and thus we see Europe embroiled in another war for "democracy."

As far as this country being in danger of a Fascist attack, there are military and naval reports which were made to Congress recently that show conclusively that America could hold her own against Germany.

Our best means of defense lies in stopping all aid to the enemy in the way of scrap iron, oil and other war supplies, and in using our surplus to feed, clothe and house the citizens of this country.

Education Funds

I could hardly believe my eyes when I saw in the new budget the frightful cut made in the amount of money requested for the United States Office of Education, which, in any real preparedness, should be greatly increased. A drop from a meager $95,000,000 to only $19,000,000 looks as if education in this country is to be penalized, not helped, to support Britain's battle.

President Roosevelt promised substantial domestic welfare support when he called our young men to the colors. What preparedness work can be done for the 31,000,000 children of school age when appropriations for this office are reduced over 75 per cent? LOUIS W. RAPEER.

Magnetic Pole

Your attention is called to an error in this morning's Post. It is stated that if Columbus were to leave Spain today and follow the same compass course as in 1492 he would wind up in South America because the magnetic North Pole is now far to the west of where it was in 1492. The statement would be correct if the magnetic pole had been left out, for it is true that in the region in question the compass now points considerably more to the west than it did at that time.

However, this has nothing to do with the North Magnetic Pole. The idea that the compass points toward the magnetic pole was held by scientists when its failure to point true north was first discovered; and although it has long since been disproven it is still widely believed by laymen and even by many writers of otherwise scientific articles for lay readers. This notion naturally led to the idea that changes in the direction of the compass signify motion of the magnetic pole. Both of these ideas are wholly fallacious.

That the compass does not point toward the magnetic pole may be illustrated as follows: (a) At Washington the North Magnetic Pole bears about 11 degrees west of true north, whereas the compass points about 7 degrees west of north (for places free from local irregularity, either natural or artificial). (b) In eastern Nebraska, the magnetic pole is true north, but the compass points 9 degrees east of north. (c) At Point Barrow, the magnetic pole bears 62 degrees east of north, but the compass points only 30 degrees east of north.

As for the actual motion of the magnetic poles, very little is known. They are inaccessible in regions, and since but little use would be made of knowledge of their locations, few attempts to locate them have been made. Nothing whatever is known of their locations at the time of Columbus. No doubt they are moving, but the secular changes of the earth's magnetism are far too great and too complicated to be explained by any rotation of the magnetic field as a whole. The causes of the secular change must be regional rather than world-wide.

"Apathy On The Air"

I read with interest the editorial in The Post of January 6 on "Apathy on the Air." The word "apathy" appeals to me. I read and heard in advance of the awful things which were to happen after December 31, when ASCAP was to banish good music—unless! Truth to tell I have heard so little "good" music and so much that was vile for months past, that I was rather eager to note what would happen when the dreaded deadline was reached. Lo and behold nothing happened except that I am here to say that in the first week of 1941 I have heard vastly more "good music" than during any week of the old year. Music that we love seems to have replaced music (?) that we loathe.

While ASCAP and BMI fight out their battle, let the broadcasting station give us gems of the old masters—orchestra, piano, violin, cello, organ and voice interspersed with plenty of our grand Southern melodies and we will indulge the hope that when the (copyright) war is over we will not again be regaled with the cheap trash which has polluted the atmosphere hour after hour for most of the days of 1940.

Yours for Liszt, Chopin, Chaminade, Moskowski, Mrs. Beach, Chaikovski and many others of this kind. C. N. W.

England's Privileged Classes

I think Mr. Underwood in his latest letter regarding the "ruling classes" in England makes a serious error in identifying the "rich" with the "privileged" classes, a distinction which I was careful to avoid. Such a distinction seems to me so relevant to our discussion that I should like to amplify its significance.

We must remember that Britain is a monarchy and an empire at the same time as having certain democratic institutions, and that, unlike the Scandinavian countries, the crown still exercises much more authority than is generally recognized. The authority of the King to create new "honours" (peerages and other titles) is a powerful weapon in the hands of the Conservative Party, and no survey of British politics must fail to take that power into consideration.

The neutral conservatism of the crown has in recent years provided a potent bulwark behind which British reactionaries of all kinds have been able to conceal themselves, and they have come more and more, as their own power declined, to make use of the privileges of the crown for their own ends. The King, as a symbol of government, is supposed never to exhibit class or political bias, and yet which King as ever dared to speak in public for the rights of his underprivileged subjects—apart from Edward VIII, whose Cardiff speech was held by many in England to be the real cause of his enforced abdication? Yet, such is the strength of this myth that for merely venturing to suggest the Conservatives' sympathies of the crown Sir Stafford Cripps, then leader of the opposition, was forced to make an ignominous retraction of his statement in the House of Commons, and was even attacked from within his own party!

I am not trying to suggest that the King is part of a conspiracy to maintain the Conservative Party in permanent authority in Britain (though the late George V was often credited with the formation of the first "National" government), but rather to establish the fact that the prestige of the crown has repeatedly been used to overawe the representatives of the British working classes and to short-circuit their reforms. Apart from Ramsay MacDonald there are numerous cases of labor leaders, such as the late Lord Snowdon, who have undergone a complete change of ideology along with their change of rank.

Since in America titles do not exist it is sometimes hard to realize the many privileges, both financial and social, with which such "honours" are associated. There are few large business institutions in Britain which do not have their quota of peers on the directors' pay roll so that their titles may adorn the company's letterhead, and few indeed are the members of the peerage who have not been able to capitalize in some form on their position. It must also be emphatically stated that those of them who have become impoverished do not by any means lose their former position and respect, and often remain influential members of the community in spite of their poverty, which is certainly not the case among similar old American families outside of New England and the South. The social privileges which a title brings and the preferential treatment it accords must surely be acknowledged as the basis for the class system in Britain.

I therefore believe that most Americans will find it hard to conceive of any fundamental democratic changes in Britain unless the entire system of "honours," and especially hereditary ones, is completely revised. The public schools, which have served admirably in wartime, must also serve Britain in time of peace by accepting the twentieth century wholeheartedly and not by turning their backs on it in an elaborate pretense that Britain is still in the days of Queen Victoria. There is an enormous amount of native talent in the British Isles which has never been given a chance to develop, and one of Britain's chief postwar problems should be the giving of opportunities to those who, because they "don't belong" or are "too clever," have been pushed into the background. I should be interested to hear Mr. Underwood's opinions regarding these matters in which all Americans are passionately interested, from the point of view of the more liberal elements in Britain, among which, I believe, he can be numbered. ## The Post Impressionist

A Big White Lie

I HAVE NO trouble in remembering the first lovebirds I ever saw. They were our hired girl Ola, and my handsome cousin, Daniel Snagey.

Whenever Cousin Dan came to call, he and Ola would go out into the kitchen, and shut the door. Cousin Daniel was so quiet you never knew when he was there and when he wasn't. And you couldn't get a word out of Ola.

Penny Perkins, my very best friend, took considerable interest in Ola's courtship.

Meeting her one day on the corner, I whispered darkly, "Yesterday something terrible happened. And it's making Cousin Daniel and Ola feel very sad."

"What?" implored Fanny, breathlessly.

"Guess," I tantalized her.

"You saw them kiss in the parlor," giggled Penny.

"Nothing like it," I answered. "They were in the parlor, but they weren't kissing, because I was there. Ola was cutting out a dress pattern on the floor when it happened."

"Not on your mother's new rug, Nonnie?" gasped Penny Perkins.

"Right on it," I lamented. "Because Ola's a very determined person. Once she makes up her mind, my father says, you can't change it. Of course, Penny, Cousin Dan being a close relative, mother has to let them use the parlor sometimes, or it wouldn't look right. Aunt Willie says love is a strange thing, and that the unattractive girls always get the best-looking men."

Retracing the road to my childhood, I see Ola and Danny in the parlor. Ola is studying her dress pattern on the floor, while Cousin Dan watches her, as he sits in my father's favorite chair. There is frank admiration in my cousin's dark face, and considerable affection. As long as he knows Ola, Danny will stand in awesome pride of her native ability.

Ola cuts her Sunday dress, which is to be blue, and plain as Ola's own small face. Cousin Dan winks an eye at me, and teases Ola about her pretty wedding gown. Since Cousin Dan is rarely funny, I laugh my loudest.

Ola and Danny laugh with me. In that moment Ola makes her great mistake. Carelessly flipping her scissors, she separates the fringe from my mother's new rug.

Woe unto anyone who would dare to misuse my mother's first new rug in 12 years!

Very quietly Ola pats the fringe back into place, just as my mother's footsteps sound in the hall. She has come in without ringing the bell, and so quietly that we have not heard her. In the sudden moment of surprise Ola grabs her sewing and rushes up the back stairs, while Cousin Dan and I start talking about the uplifting drama at Martin's opera house.

My mother, looking in, sees nothing amiss.

To add to our worries, my little brother Leo enters from the kitchen. We did not even know he was in the house, since he is not given over to noise. If he has seen Ola cutting the fringe he will betray us, for Leo is a born traitor. But when the week has passed and Leo has still not spoken, we know he is unaware of our dilemma.

In the same kind way Providence has decreed that Pollyanna, our talkative parrot, should not find those fitting words for telling my mother her rug has been spoiled. Every now and then Ola and I experience terrible moments, when we believe Pollyanna has discovered the words for rug, cut, Ola, and fringe. When no one is around, Ola steals in to look at the rug, and we hope for the best.

For a month the fringe-cutting remains a secret. Then my mother announces her decision to entertain the Ladies' Aid in her best parlor. There are to be several speakers of State importance, one of whom will spend the night with us. Naturally, the parlor must be dusted and swept for this great event.

With a heavy heart, Ola enters the best parlor, carrying her duster and mop. A few minutes later she emerges, her face frankly distressed.

"Mrs. Adams," she calls, her voice expressing deep surprise. "They sold you a poor rug."

My mother, tidying up the spare bedroom, practically flew downstairs.

"They what, Ola?" she bristles. "Not the rose-and-parrot rug in the best parlor?"

"The same," affirms Ola. "Come and see."

Quickly Ola takes my mother into the best parlor, and shows her the rug. With scorn in her voice and hands, Ola interprets the resentment Mrs. Adams should feel.

They have only had the rug a month, remembers Ola. Mrs. Adams has allowed her nephew the pleasure of sitting there several times, when he has called on Ola, and one evening, the family walked across it, just to see how well it held up. This morning Ola has cleaned the parlor, and what has she found? A second-hand rug, with the fringe half off it. The Adamses, mind you, one of the best families in town, have been sent an old rug, for the price of the new.

The next week the salesman calls for the first payment on the new rug. Spying him, as I tie my hood to go to Aunt Willie's, I call Ola in from the kitchen reading of "The Life of Deadshot Billy." With a menacing face Ola answers the door.

[What Ola says to the salesmen about his cheaply-put-together rug cannot be written here, or, for that matter, anywhere. She is still telling him when my mother, hearing her loud voice, comes downstairs.

What Ola has left unsaid, my mother now says. The salesman, young and inexperienced, finds himself standing between two tigers. Wiping perspiration from his forehead, he promises a new rug in the same rose and yellow pattern.

The following week, a new rug graces the floor of the Adamses' best parlor. The same day that Cousin Dan helps my father carry the rug from the hallway into the parlor, Ola wears her blue dress for the first time. NONNIE E. ADAMS.

Jockeying For Trade Power

OF THE THREE most pressing British needs—for cash, shipping and planes and other war materials—this country can most easily meet the need for cash. Essentially, the President's lend-lease plan of aid to Britain is a device to meet this need in a limited way, by giving American products to the British without requiring cash payments.

A movement is already afoot in the Government to meet the British need for cash abroad as well as in this country, by supplementing the British effort of economic warfare with an effort of our own. And that is why the behind-the-scenes jockeying for control of the lend-lease program may prove to have great future significance.

To deal first with the current aspect of the problem, the prize for which the various agencies and departments are competing is the power to settle what quid pro quo the British must offer us for our loaned or leased products. The decision as to what the British are to get, and what we are to retain, is naturally to be left to the President and the chiefs of the Army and Navy. But the bargaining power is anybody's for the taking.

THE NATURAL competitors are the Commerce Department, the Treasury and the office of the Administrator of Export Control. Rather different views are held by each. Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones, the best trader in the Government, regards the lend-lease program as a business proposition, places great emphasis on the opportunity to improve America's economic position at Britain's expense. Such at least is the impression of Jones' friends at the Capitol, where his influence is so great that the President's plan may well be altered to place the bargaining job squarely in Jones' hands.

The Treasury, under Secretary Henry Morgenthau, jr., has always thought first of the broader aspects of the President's foreign policy. Morgenthau hates to be taken in, and has never been soft with the British, but his strongest emphasis is on quick aid to Britain. While firm about liquidation of British direct investments in this country, and insistent that the lend-lease program bring us adequate credits of such vital raw materials as rubber and tin, he would not follow Jones in using the war crisis to take Britain's last wooden nickel.

AS FOR THE OFFICE of Export Control, its administrator, Col. Russell Maxwell, has proved himself a remarkably efficient executive, who would approach the problem with considerations of American military and naval strategy primarily in mind. Since Congress, last July, strengthened the governmental authority over important exports, Col. Maxwell has worked directly under the President. While Secretary Jones has the edge on the Hill, Secretary Morgenthau and Col. Maxwell have equally good chances of White House support.

Since they are different aspects of the same problem, the agency which has charge of the bargaining under the lend-lease program is also likely to direct the American effort of economic warfare, if such an effort is made. In circles close to the White House the wisdom of participating in economic warfare against the Axis powers has long been discussed. The President has shown a lively interest. And it seems reasonably certain that the matter will be put up to Congress if the lend-lease program goes through without too much opposition.

An American effort of economic warfare is both feasible and urgently required. The British are running short not only of dollar exchange, but also of all kinds of cash resources. With insufficient cash reserves, they cannot back up their naval blockade of Germany with a simultaneous economic blockade. This country has the cash reserves, now needs the same raw materials that Britain cannot keep out of the hands of the Axis powers, and is well equipped to handle the situation. So far, little has been done. Even in South America, where we are lending huge sums, we have seldom asked for economic concessions favorable to ourselves and harmful to the Axis as part payment for our loans.

ALTHOUGH no practical steps have been taken, much thought has been given to the subject, chiefly in the same agencies now in competition for the bargaining power under the lend-lease program. At the Commerce Department, Undersecretary Wayne Chatfield Taylor has evolved a strikingly interesting over-all program, including both economic warfare and concurrent preparation for postwar reconstruction. At the Treasury there are thoughts of a liaison committee, with representatives of all the interested Government agencies, and an executive chairman. And at the office of Export Control plans are already laid for practical action if and when the time comes.

JESSE JONES
"The Best Trader . . ."

It will of course be very costly to embark on economic warfare. Cornering the world copper supply, for example, is not a cheap thing to do. None of the estimates of annual outlay thus far prepared are under the billion mark. But before becoming too deeply alarmed about additional spending, those who consider the problem should remember two things. By its very nature, money spent in economic warfare is not a dead loss. In the last war, indeed, the allied efforts came near, in the end, to showing a profit. And if the American policy of aid to Britain short of war means anything, it ought to mean American help in the economic field. Meeting Britain's needs for war materials and shipping may be difficult. Economic aid, however, is both simple and deadly effective.

Rediscovered Agency

ONE OF THE oddest stories of the national defense program is the Defense Plant Corporation's. The DPC might almost be called the lost defense agency. Certainly it has been overlooked. Until recently many manufacturers who must expand their plants to make war implements were unaware of its existence, and some high Government officials looked blank when its name was mentioned.

Yet the DPC already has financed more than $300,000,000 of plant expansion, and is almost submerged by new applications.

To sense the significance of this one must go back to last summer when the huge rearmament program was launched. The first big obstacle it hit was financing the expansion and equipping of plants for defense.

The Administration was opposed to Government ownership of manufacturing facilities except for explosives and other special items of the kinds already made in Government arsenals. But private producers naturally balked at investing many millions of dollars in special facilities unless assured they could recover their investment.

THE DEFENSE program marked time while this problem was worked out. Congressional action was necessary to permit the new facilities to be written off in a five-year period. Defense Commissioner Knudsen said this was "Problem No. 1." When Congress had finally acted, there were difficulties in getting satisfactory contract forms. The first ones did not protect the Government's interest. It was late October before the problem was ironed out.

During all this time the Government had in existence an agency for financing plant expansion simply and expeditiously. This was the Defense Plant Corporation, a subsidiary of the RFC.

The difficulties about plant expansion had been foreseen by Clifford Durr, assistant general counsel, and other RFC lawyers, when the great defense appropriations were before Congress. They drafted a bill which Congress passed. It authorized the RFC not only to make defense loans, but to set up a corporation to construct and lease to private manufacturers plants and facilities for defense production.

THE DEFENSE Plant Corporation, accordingly, was set up with Emil Schram as its head and Durr as its general counsel. And in late June and July it already was working out plans to finance the expansion of the Packard Motor Co. to make Rolls-Royce engines, of the Wright Aeronautical Co. and other engine and airplane makers.

One contract was signed. Then the RFC ran into snags. Manufacturers were told to wait on the new financing plan being worked out by the NDAC.

Two objections to the DPC seem to have been made. The first was that title to the new facilities rested in the DPC, a Government agency. This apparently awakened fears of Government competition with private industry at some future date. The second objection was that it was Government money. The NDAC policy was to finance expansion so far as possible from idle funds in the banks.

Beyond these specific objections there seems to have been an incredible quantity of confusion, misinformation and bureaucratic jealousy. At one meeting in October a high War Department official dressed down a representative of the DPC for "delaying" defense. This was in connection with the financing of a large engine and plane producer.

ACTUALLY THE DPC had worked out this financing weeks earlier, and the delay had been imposed by the insistence of the NDAC and the War Department on their own method of doing it through what came to be known as the Emergency Plant Facilities Contract. During the weeks required to work this out the company in question probably would have lost its options on real estate needed for expansion if the DPC had not temporarily assisted it. Later the same day, when he learned of the facts, the War Department official apologized, and a few days later gave the DPC the go-ahead signal for several large contracts.

Lately manufacturers have been flocking to the DPC. Its contracts are more simply negotiated than the EPFC contracts. And the manufacturers can go ahead right away without peddling their EPFC contracts from one bank to another. The long and elaborate effort to draw banking funds into plant expansion for defense has proved much of a flop.

THE DPC HAS two types of contracts. Under the first it builds or equips the plant and leases it to the manufacturer for five years at $1 a year. At the end of five years the manufacturer may acquire the facilities by paying the cost minus depreciation, at rates fixed in the contract. This provision is similar to the one in the EPFC contract, but has some minor advantages for the Government.

Under the second type, the manufacturer pays a rental based on his gross sales. This is used chiefly for subcontractors who cannot easily segregate their work for defense from their regular business.

To date the DPC has financed more than $300,000,000 in plant expansion, while only a little more than $100,000,000 has been done through the EPFC. It seems high time for the existence of the DPC to be noticed.

Requires Presidential Authority

THE GOVERNMENT of the United States, whose head is the President, is charged by the people of this country to accomplish two things: To see to it that the British Empire and Commonwealth are not defeated and destroyed, and to keep us out of participation in the war as active belligerents.

That such is the will of an overwhelming majority of the Nation is not open to argument. The recent election campaign furnished ample proof of it. Both candidates, the President and Mr. Willkie, made these two objectives the basis of their foreign policy: to do everything possible to aid Britain and not to go to war.

After the election the President waited—for what some of us felt was an unconscionable time—to allow public opinion to crystallize. He did not push it; he took a rest; he went on a cruise; he was silent.

In this vacuum, as far as White House leadership went, public opinion did not retreat or change. On the contrary, it accumulated, as every Gallup Poll shows. The realization of what British defeat would mean to the United States became clearer and clearer. Even those who would diminish aid to Britain, even the outstanding isolationists, like Senator Wheeler, have been forced to mislead the people, unwittingly no doubt, by suggesting that an all-out effort by America might only prevent a "just peace" from being negotiated now.

The "just peace" which the Senator outlined, however, presumes a complete British victory, for it includes the return of Germany to her 1914 boundaries, the restoration of all the independent states of Europe, the restoration of the German colonies, the internationalization of the Suez Canal, and no annexations or indemnities.

I say without any hesitation or qualification that if such a peace could be obtained, Great Britain would certainly know it, and would stop the war tomorrow. Nothing remotely resembling such a peace is yet or ever was in Hitler's mind. The conclusion of such a peace would mean Hitler's end, for it would be proof that he has launched wholesale destruction against civilization for what Germany could easily have obtained by negotiation.

Even Senator Johnson reaffirmed on Friday that he was no appeaser and wanted to "see Hitler whipped and Britain triumphant."

BUT, WHAT the American people have charged their Government to do is just about as difficult as anything conceivable.

It is to achieve an objective while limiting the means of achieving it. "Do not let Britain be defeated and do not go to war." It is like saying "see that we have our cake and eat it, too."

Yet, it is possible of accomplishment, and the instinct of the people that it is possible is not silly.

For the totalitarian states themselves have demonstrated the usefulness of such a program, and by making their own concepts of international law, have destroyed all precedents.

The concept that a nation can be not neutral but nonbelligerent was advanced by Mussolini—and it would now seem that if he had kept to that status he would have been much wiser.

Russia, while claiming neutrality, is in every respect, except belligerently, an ally of Germany vis-a-vis Europe, while she remains an ally of China in the Far East. She has turned herself into a granary and raw material hinterland for Germany and is making every move in coordination with those of the Nazis.

Through the Commmunist Party in all countries, including our own—through such propaganda as he commands—Stalin is supporting the Nazis. And Communist efforts in France, in this direction, were a contribution to the Germans of the first importance.

At the same time, Stalin keeps his troops for moves wholly concerned with the protection of Russian territory and interests, and allows himself freedom of policy in other directions. When the war is over he hopes to emerge still as a neutral and with the advantage of such a bargaining position.

What Stalin is doing is not impossible, and it is not stupid. And what we propose to do is not impossible and not stupid, but extremely intelligent.

THE PRESIDENT fully intends to carry through this very imaginative and very difficult mandate.

But it demands completely unified command. It demands great elasticity, quick decisions, the power to move here and retreat there, boldness, speed and authority. It involves risk—and the President did his country a service when, in the address to Congress, he said so. It is also completely true that it involves less risk than any other conceivable policy.

But the risk will vary in exact ratio to the amount of coordination and efficiency which we can command.

This coordination must be exercised between diplomatic moves, the defense effort, the financial and economic policy, and the armed forces, and there is only one person who can be charged with such a responsibility and that is the democratically elected President of the United States.

IT HAPPENS that this column supported the President in the recent elections, but our viewpoint in the present emergency is not influenced by this fact. For had Mr. Willkie been elected we should have been in favor of precisely the powers which the President now asks. And I am convinced that were there a Republican President, most Republicans would support these powers.

For the policy of the people cannot be realized without them. And if it fails the question of "dictatorship" will have become wholly academic. There are times when Republics must have coordinated leadership and authority or perish.

EVERY REPUBLIC that is healthy knows this, and every republic in history that has survived great emergencies has done so by delegating authority during those emergencies. The one thing that the people must see to is that the authority is not used to destroy permanently the structure of the state itself or to intrench a party clique in permanent power.

The President today heads a Cabinet and a defense board which are bi-partisan, and to draw parallels between totalitarianism and this sort of emergency authority is wholly misleading.

Time and again democratic republics have saved themselves by freely and voluntarily suspending the routines of peaceful and prosperous times and resorting to what amounts to a limited dictatorship. Rome did so in the greatest days of the republic; France did so under Poincare in the critical '20s, and if she had done so in 1937 or '38 there might still be a free French Republic and not a dictatorship to ratify collapse and defeat. Indeed, we misuse the word "dictatorship," confusing it with despotism and tyranny, which are quite different things.

A society to be anything at all has got to survive, and there are times when survival means completely responsible authority. It was so in the days of Lincoln, and it is so today.

George Thinks It Over

DRIVING to the office today, George Spelvin, American, thought approximately as follows:

Well, the way I feel about it you take like nowadays when all you hear about is, if you are a dope you are underprivileged, and if you are a crook, well, then, you aren't as bad as the big corporations, but if you are a sap and work your head off, then they will come around and tell you how terrible it is about selfish people who don't give a damn for anybody else when everybody knows some people are just bums, and when they do get hold of some money they never pay their doctor bills or grocery bills or anything. Although, sure, I admit it doesn't have to mean you are a bum just because you had some bad breaks or you voted for Roosevelt, but it doesn't mean you are a louse, either, just because you happen to do your work right and take care of your own kids and your bills and you voted for Willkie.

LIKE WHEN I was a kid if you were a big shot you had an iron deer on your front lawn, and everybody used to think if you had an iron deer you were a rich louse and stole your money, but just the same everybody wanted to be a big shot, and most of them tried. Everybody took care of their own kids, too, and the President's wife wasn't running around trying to fix it so the Government would take care of your kids so you would vote for her old man, and her own kids could sell a lot of insurance or pull down $1,500 a week shooting off their face on the radio. And still all this popping off about how this time nobody is going to get rich out of the war, and what I would like to know is didn't they say this whole New Deal was a war against poverty, and I wish you would be so kind as to kindly tell me who got any richer than his family did out of that war if you will be so kind.

Sure I don't think anybody ought to get rich out of any war, but it certainly is mighty funny to me like if an ordinary citizen makes a couple of passes and wins some dough by hard work and brains he is a Tory if he wants to hang onto some of it, but if you happen to say aye, yes or no about the way Mr. Big's family got rich out of the war against poverty, then you are an appeaser or something.

BECAUSE, like I say, everybody wanted to have an iron deer on their front lawn, but the New Deal comes along and says, "All right, boys; nobody gets any iron deers any more, but we will spread the wealth around so everybody will get a castiron rabbit," and the first thing you know they are all tearing down to the junk yard to raise two bits on their rabbit, and in a few days only a few people have got their rabbits left, so the New Deal says again, "Okay, it ain't right for some Tories to have a castiron rabbit on their front lawn and all the underprivileged haven't got any, so we will call in the rabbits, and from now on everybody gets a castiron mouse for their front lawn."

Well, it goes on like that, with everybody getting a castiron beetle, then a castiron bug and finally nobody has got anything unless they happen to be certain parties who didn't take that stuff too seriously how nobody was supposed to get rich out of the war against poverty or the war against Hitler.

BUT YOU TAKE a walk out in the country and put a board against a high stone wall and look over onto a big private lawn the size of a country club, and there, by God, you see whole herds of thousands of castiron deers, and whose place do you think this is?

Well, one thing is sure: You don't live there, you bum of a Tory appeaser, because you are all flattened out, and your own house is gone for taxes and your insurance and savings got taken a long time ago, and the Government is raising your kids now so they get wrong ideas about selfish greed.

I guess there is nothing you can do about it, though, Spelvin. Just relax. It is too late to do anything about it now.

What Mahan Foresaw

By Barnet Nover

Britain, America And Sea Power

THE DRIFT of events which has compelled the United States to become in an increasing degree the partner of Great Britain in the struggle against the forces which threaten to destroy civilization did not begin yesterday or at the time of Munich or even in 1933.

The situation which faces this Nation and our beleaguered sister democracy today was already in the making when Adolf Hitler was still only the habitue of a Viennese doss house, eking out his living by coloring picture postcards. Indeed, historically considered, Hitler and his regime are nothing more than the continuation, in particularly virulent and ruthless form, of trends and tendencies evident in German policy in the days of William II.

THESE TRENDS and tendencies and the meaning they held for the United States were accurately portrayed, for instance, by Alfred Thayer Mahan as far back as 1910. Americans were then blissfully unaware of the fearful storm clouds gathering over Europe. Many of them were certain that war was on the way to joining slavery as an outworn and discredited institution. And even when the storm broke—in 1914—few dreamed that it would ultimately sweep over us, too.

As a student of world forces, one whose great work, "The Influence of Sea Power upon History, 1660-1783" had a profound effect on the thinking of his time, Admiral Mahan was acutely aware of the developing European crisis and its significance both for the nations immediately involved and for those, like the United States, that appeared to be outside its orbit. In a series of articles published in 1910 he proceeded to describe both the nature of the crisis and the course of action necessary to circumvent it. These articles, later reprinted in a volume, "The Interest of America in International Conditions" have as great a timeliness today as when they first appeared. For the situation that Mahan foresaw a generation ago now confronts us in all its grim seriousness.

ADMIRAL MAHAN
Foresaw the Storm

IN ITS BID for world power, Mahan pointed out in a survey of the international situation during the first decade of the twentieth century, Germany could get nowhere unless and until it had smashed Great Britain and British sea power. To that end the Kaiser's Reich was building a fleet which was rapidly becoming superior to any except the British. For the same reason, a conflict between Germany and Great Britain was inevitable and might even involve an attempt at invasion of the British Isles.

Speaking of such an invasion Mahan said the idea was no longer fantastic even though it had been entertained and abandoned by Napoleon in the nineteenth century and by Choiseul in the days of Louis XIV.

"At present," he said, "the physical difficulties are greatly reduced by steam, which makes the necessary ferriage of troops wholly independent of wind and weather, and extremely rapid. This does not indeed entirely remove the obstacles and delays inherent in assembling the vessels and embarking the troops, an operation embracing a multiplicity of nice details, scarcely to be effected without timely observations; but the mobilization against Austria and France (in 1866, 1870) are remembered, as well as the astute policy which preceded and precipitated them. There has been a real fear among men whose opinions demand consideration that by surprise a body of troops might be landed sufficient to overpower organized opposition; an army in the face of a mob.

"Hence the concentration of the British navy; and correlative to it a German naval program, involving not merely the number of ships but the evolution of a complete factory and docking system, for the rapid preparation and maintenance of naval materials of all kinds, in large quantities."

WERE GREAT BRITAIN overwhelmed, Mahan pointed out, the greatest check upon Germany would have been removed. "It follows," he went on to say, "that the condition and strength of Great Britain is a matter of national interest to every other community. With her far more liberal institutions and consequent weaker organization of force, replete to satiety with colonial possessions, she has no adequate stimulus to aggression, least of all against the United States; nor has she in these days of organization the national efficiency of which Germany is at present the consummate and unrivalled example."

Because in a competition of force between Germany and Great Britain the latter would be inferior to the former there "springs a necessity for all states, or rather for all peoples, who recognize the importance to themselves of equality or opportunity in the world markets, to consider with what attitude of mind, what comprehension of conditions and what measure of force they will approach the inevitable developments of the future. If one state be decisively stronger than every other, the balance, as in former times, can be maintained only by understandings and combinations among the weaker."

The implication is clear. Germany's challenge to Great Britain would sooner or later compel the United States to throw its weight into the balance on the side of Britain. Mahan died before that happened, although he had clearly foreseen the development. He certainly did not live to see the gains of victory in 1918 thrown to the winds by the United States in the years that followed. Nor could he have anticipated that in the weakness and confusion of the democracies in the postwar period Germany would be able to revive the program she had been forced to abandon in defeat, and actually make greater and more rapid progress in the direction of world dominance than the Kaiser had ever succeeded in doing. But now, as then, the drift of forces is bringing Great Britain and the United States together to undo, if there is still time, the mistakes of 1919-1939, to regain, at terrific cost, the victory that was thrown away after being won at so fearful a price.

'Rebel' Laborite Calls for British 'People's' Regime

London, Jan. 12 (AP).—A campaign for a "people's government" with power to take over banks, land transport and big industries was launched today by a "rebel" Laborite, Denis Pritt, at a meeting of 2,000 workers' representatives.

Pritt, 53, a lawyer, educated at one of England's most exclusive schools, offered a resolution also demanding a higher standard of living, adequate bombproof shelters, restoration of all trade union rights, independence for India, friendship for Soviet Russia and "a people's peace."

"Our policy," he declared, "is to offer to the peoples of the enemy a peace of no annexations, no reparations or indemnities, with liberty to all peoples to determine their own destiny.

"We know the German people, freed from fears based on the declarations of British propagandists, will no longer be willing to fight and suffer for Hitler's aims, but will accept such an offer if it is made by a people's government in whom they have confidence."

D. C. Diplomatic Set Throngs Blooms' Party

Festive Afternoon Affair Attracts Crowd of Notables; Wallaces, Hurleys And Number of Foreign Envoys Attend

By Carolyn Bell

When the three Blooms—Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and their daughter Vera—give a party they do so with an exuberance that might well be the envy of Elsa Maxwell. Exposed to such enthusiasm, diplomatic, official and cave-dwelling Washington unbends.

Yesterday afternoon between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock two harassed policemen attempted to manage traffic swirling about 1930 Columbia Road—to no avail. The Blooms were receiving, virtually all Washington.

The interior of the massive house is done Italian style with deep colors, baroque furniture and heavily embroidered tapestries. The patio, so pleasant in the summer, escaped notice yesterday. In the drawing room white lilies were used. Mrs. Bloom wore a deep rose crepe frock trimmed in duboonet velvet. A jacket affair, it was clipped with two jewels at the neckline. Miss Bloom—who buzzed about gaily—wore a deep yellow crepe gown edged in rows of tiny lace. A topaz pin completed the ensemble.

Something of a "Mexican reunion" occurred in the dining room early in the afternoon for Vice President-elect and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Mrs. Patrick Hurley and the Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera chatted together. They all—as well as their hosts—had attended the recent inauguration of President Avila Camacho.

Gen. John Phillip Hill—one of the few in frock coat—complimented Mrs. Hurley on her white feather hat—a tiny toque with pure white feathers dangling down the back. Another who leaned toward feathers was Mme. Ertgun sporting a tiny blue creation. She was accompanying her husband, the Turkish Ambassador. Mme. Hurban, in a cocoa frock, poured tea and was joined later by the Minister from Czecho-Slovakia, Vladimir Hurban, in a gayer mood than we have seen him in many a day. Mrs. Walter F. George, Lady Chalkley, Mrs. George T. Marye and Mrs. George Barnett also took turns at the table.

Sipping coffee was the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, just returned from one of his numerous lecture tours. The Charge d'Affaires of Great Britain and Mrs. Neville Butler dropped in for a few minutes, as did Associate Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, she wearing a bright red turban. Senator and Mrs. William D. King and Dr. Leo Rowe also paid a visit.

Table Loaded With 'Goodies'

With a crimson carnation tucked in his lapel, Representative Bloom was urging guests to try his special cocktail—a harmless tasting Scotch and honey affair. One of his customers was Mrs. McCeney Werlich, whose black ensemble was topped by a white flower hat. The Minister from Portugal and Mme. Bianchi were there, she wearing a smart Schiaparelli coat with a cape-effect collar of beaver. Not far away was her daughter, Miss Sibilla Skidelsky in a wide halo hat of black with a lacy gold band and dripping veil. Miss Skidelsky, who currently pops up with articles in magazines, is now working on one about young American architects.

Dieters know by now to avoid the tea table at a Bloom party. Such goodies as cream puffs filled with whipped cream and fresh strawberries, mushroom sandwiches, caviar and shrimp were not missing yesterday. The table was centered with a large, spring-like bouquet of roses, tulips and gladioli.

Mrs. Rubenstein Attends Party

Diplomats were somewhat in the majority at yesterday's party. The Australian Minister and Mrs. Richard Casey were there as were the Minister from Greece and Mme. Diamantopolous, the Minister from Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch, the Minister from South Africa and Mrs. Ralph Close and dozens of others.

Two perennial eligibles, Clarence Hewes and Arthur Bradley Campbell circulated about the rooms. Getting the lion's share of attention was Mrs. Arthur Rubenstein, lovely young wife of the Polish pianist. Her famous husband arrived in Washington late last evening. Still others there were Mrs. Ernest G. Draper, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Bennett, George Summerlin, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Berle, Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling, Representative and Mrs. William D. Byron, Miss Christine Eckengrin, the Misses Mary and Polly Randolph, the Minister Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Baron, the Commercial Counselor of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, Sir Wilmott and Lady Lewis and scores of others.

CAPITAL WHIRL

by Sally Swift

BEING POSSESSED of a charming wife, a sense of humor and an excellent cook is a sure receipt for popularity in Washington, and the Counselor of the British Embassy in charge of press relations, S. L. Childs, has all three. Add to that the fact that the Childs have traveled all over Europe and Latin America in connection with Mr. Childs' work for the Internatoinal Labor Office in Geneva, and that they obviously appreciate and enjoy each country visited, and you will understand why they have so many friends since coming to Washington this winter.

The Childs have rented Mrs. Harry Wardman's house on Massachusetts Avenue and have turned the lower floors into offices for Mr. Childs' staff while keeping an apartment on the top floor for themselves. Mrs. Childs laughingly says that she is never surprised to arrive home and find that one more desk (occupied) has been added to the family's quarters.

Lunching with the Childs the other day was Mrs. Robert B. Macatee whose husband is stationed at the U. S. Legation in Belgrade and who is spending the winter in Washington with her children. When offered one of the Childs' special Yugoslav cigarettes, Mrs. Macatee accepted with pleasure and said that her schoolgirl daughter, knowing her weakness for Yugoslav cigarettes, had unostentatiously brought along a supply when they left Belgrade. These she has doled out to her mother on special occasions over several months, the treasure being exhausted to celebrate Christmas. When Mrs. Macatee asked the child if it hadn't been a bother keeping the cigarettes so long she replied, "Oh, no. I've had them in my coat pocket all the time." Having learned the location of the cache, Mrs. Macatee better understood the weird shapes of the cigarettes.

Lunching with Mr. and Mrs. Childs were Harry Villard, of the State Department; Mr. and Mrs. Rene McColl, the latter down from New York, where Mr. McColl is with the British Library of Information. The MacColls have fallen in love with Washington and Mr. MacColl, after praising our public buildings, parks, trees, etc., said that "another nice thing about Washington was its being so close to Baltimore." To one who considers Baltimore as an obstacle on the road to the Maryland Hunt Cup or New York, this idea had a novelty. Presently it was explained that Mr. MacColl, who was sent from duty with the Royal Air Force to his job in New York, had learned journalism on the Baltimore Sun and that his pretty wife is from nearby Pennsylvania.

BEING ENTERTAINED before their departure for his new post at the United States Embassy in Berlin are Mr. and Mrs. Eugene M. Hinkle. The Hinkles have had a tour of duty at the United States Legation in the Dominican Republic and more recently have been at home on leave. Now they are off to Berlin by way of Lisbon and are looking forward to an interesting if hazardous trip. Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Pell gave a cocktail party for the Hinkles the other afternoon and Jake Beam also was among those who have asked friends in to say goodby to Mr. and Mrs. Hinkle.

In the midst of a week-end of farewell parties in honor of himself and his wife, Christopher Bramwell had the bad luck to come down with flu, leaving Mrs. Bramwell to be honor guest alone. Rear Admiral and Mrs. Courtney gave a cocktail party for the Bramwells on Saturday. Mrs. Courtney is Mrs. Bramwell's mother. The Courtney's guests included Count and Countess George Lasocki, Count and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, Mrs. Anthony Coleby, Mrs. James E. Brown, Mrs. Patrick Hill and William Elmslie.

Mrs. Sutherland Mayo entertained at dinner the same evening for the Bramwells with more guests coming in afterwards. An amusing feature of the party was the two fortune tellers, one upstairs and one down, who were busy giving mysterious predictions. Among Mrs. Mayo's guests were Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, her husband absent because of flu; Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Pell, Roberto de Mendoza, of the Cuban Embassy; Laurence Bungardeanu, of the Rumanian Legation; Mr. and Mrs. William P. McCracken, Mr. and Mrs. Henri de Sibour, Mrs. Waggaman Pulver, Mrs. Ffoulke Dewey, Mr. and Mrs. Derek Hoyer Millar, and James M. Beck.

YESTERDAY THE MILLARS asked friends in at cocktail time for still another goodby to Mr. and Mrs. Bramwell and one wonders how the travelers ever found time to pack their trunks.

Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Noyes are spending a few days visiting Mr. and Mrs. John M. Gross at Four Oaks Farm, near Bethlehem, Pa.

Job-Hunting Older Women Must Look Well

Root Out Defeatist Attitude, Is Advice Of Employment Men

By Jane Driscoll

If you are "40 plus" and job-hunting, root out your defeatist attitude, dress up and hold your head high. This is the advice of experts on employment in the business world.

Washington authorities particularly stress the need of perfect grooming for the older woman who wants to be a success in business or the professions.

"Most older women in search of a job," said the training director and employment manager of a large department store here, "fail to realize that without the charm of youth to offer, they must give more thought to good fabrics and clothes. They do have a charm of their own that they should play up to. The woman of 40 has acquired a richness of living through experience and growth that good clothes will set off."

Appearance First

"We can tell in a minute whether or not we are able to use a woman from the appearance she gives," continued the executive. "That's our first basis of judging, although everyone is given a hearing. If a woman has a painted look or has on too dressy an outfit, we immediately know she will not be of service to us.

"It is the first impression that counts," said a training director. "A good posture, one of the first things noticed, comes from an inner conviction that a woman looks her best."

At a recent symposium in Boston on the older woman, employed or otherwise, the following points were brought out:

The first thing the older woman needs to do is to appraise herself from the standpoint of her clothes, grooming and posture. As a woman grows older and her hair grays, she must learn anew how to dress to bring out her good points.

Details of Dress

Neatness and personal daintiness are extremely important, but they are not enough. The simplicity of smartly tailored clothes must be added. Trappings and ornamentations are usually in very bad taste. Accessories should be carefully chosen, with more attention to the details of dress than to costume jewelry and gadgets.

Other minutely important personal details were discussed. Fingernails should be well kept, but positively not brightly enameled. Heels should never be run over. Hair, as the department store executives agreed, is more important now than ever before. It must always look freshly shampooed and be neatly arranged.

With all this, poor posture in sitting, standing and walking could spoil everything. A woman must have a sureness of step that bespeaks confidence.

Design for Career Women

What the well-dressed, mature business woman should wear is demonstrated above by Nelly Don (in private life Mrs. James A. Reed, wife of the former Senator), who is designer, business woman and homemaker. The designer, who recently celebrated her silver anniversary in the dress manufacturing business, is here shown in a classic tailored frock. The youthful restraint in style detail and the clean cut silhouette of this dark silk crepe make it a perfect choice for the mature business woman.

Dance Routines Inspire Thigh Exercises

Take Tip From Chorus Girls Noted For Lovely Legs

By Ida Jean Kain

THE CHORUS girls have scientific exercise down pat. The swing of the limbs in a circular motion is a combination of the four movements which most effectively reach the thighs. And that's the chorine's thrice-daily stint.

The Radio City Rockettes, who are the world's leading precision dancers, have an average thigh measurement of 21 inches. Of course, they have beautiful legs, too, with a calf measurement of 13 inches; ankle, 8.

The average woman doesn't get anything like the same amount of specific exercise—and her thighs are not anything like as lovely. The front thighline is usually firm because there are the muscles used in standing, rising from a sitting position, walking up and down stairs, and as a brace in walking down grade.

But the inner and outer thigh muscles are not used effectively in our everyday movements and they are apt to be lacking in tone. The thin girls often have such pronounced hollows on the inner thighline that they actually appear bowlegged! And the plump girls get an ugly stocking top roll.

Patterned After Dance Routines

The following exercises—patterned after the side-to-side swing of the legs and knee flexion of the dance routines—will help to beautify both fat and thin thighs.

Another good thigh exercise is to stand on one foot, flex the other knee and with the knee-point describe circles. You can vary the routine by swinging the kneepoint from side to side—it's all good thigh exercise.

To discipline the thigh muscles more effectively, try swinging the leg over a chair seat. First the left leg, then the right. Stand in front of the chair, with the seat toward you, and with the foot describe an arc as you swing the leg up and over the seat of the chair.

When you are really in form, you can make things harder—and get more exercise—by raising your leg over a chair back! It will be the same exercise, but more difficult and a much better exercise!

The back thigh muscles are most frequently neglected in exercise routines by all except professional dancers. Stretching and kicking will aid in firming leg muscles and will help to reduce or develop thighs. Above, Marie Wilson, movie star, lies on the floor to do a stretching and kicking exercise that is particularly good for strengthening her diaphragm and leg muscles. Standing and swinging each leg alternately over a chair seat is another effective exercise for the thighs. The side to side swing of dance routines also is beneficial, as is standing on one foot and flexing the knees.

Improve Your Letter Writing

OH, the trouble we can make for ourselves writing one simple little letter—the false starts, the long pauses when there doesn't seem anything to say!

But in letter-writing as in anything else there's an easy way and a hard way. With helpful pointers you can quickly iron out difficulties, write notes that have friends saying "What a swell girl!"

Saddened with a thank-you note? Don't flounder around in search of pompous phrases. "Your gift was gratefully received." Just give your enthusiasm rein. Begin "Mary, dear: Wouldn't I like to give you a big hug for those woolly bunny slippers!"

And no need to get into a stew over a casual invitation. Concentrate on putting across two points, the date and hour of the event and your cordial feelings. "Dear Jim, The Spinsters are giving a dance on Friday the twenty-fourth and it would be perfect if you could come."

In ordinary friendly letters, too, you won't have to rack your brains to fill up space if you ask yourself a few questions—"What sort of things does Jeanie like to talk about?" "What's Bill's latest hobby?" Then you gaily rattle along: "I just bought the divinest dress, Jeanie." "That magazine has a fine article on aviation, Jack."

And you feel more comfortable about dropping any letter in the mail-box when you're sure it isn't sprinkled with grammatical errors like "I been" for "I've been," or "different than" for "different from."

You'll find pointers on grammar as well as many other aspects of letter-writing explained in our 40-page booklet, HOW TO WRITE LETTERS FOR ALL OCCASIONS. Gives tips on etiquette and vocabulary, interesting and correct sample letters to guide you friendly, social and business correspondence. Has love letters, too.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, HOW TO WRITE LETTERS FOR ALL OCCASIONS, to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

In Love and Engaged to Be Married, Young Couple Must Wait Two Years to Wed; Girl's Mother Sees Emotional Tension of Delay Corroding Their Morals

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My daughter is engaged to be married to a young man who is prohibited by certain professional regulations from marrying her for another two years. And therein lies the problem—which has worried me so much that I am almost ill. When they became engaged, I believed they fully understood the principles and importance of moral behavior. Both of them come from excellent backgrounds.

However, they are very much in love and my daughter has admitted they are having great difficulty in keeping their emotions under reasonable control. In fact, I am afraid that she has already made more concessions than she wants me to know. I find myself wondering if they have already lived together. If not, then I fear their relations are tending in that direction.

When I come into a room where they have been alone together, their behavior is agitated and defensive, and the young man has difficulty in meeting my eyes. My daughter has admitted that she "has trouble with him," but she has also said that she can "manage him." However, before she became engaged, she would have despised the sort of situation in which she is now involved.

Is there anything I can do to solve this horrid problem? Or does a mother, in such circumstances, have to content herself with watchful waiting? If I should learn that it is already too late to save them from rash, unmoral conduct, what then should be my course? Kindly answer at your earliest convenience.

ANXIOUS MOTHER.

How Another Mother Met Similar Problem

DEAR A. M.: Something over a year ago, an almost identical problem was brought to my attention, by another "anxious mother"—who sought my advice in a personal interview. The girl, 21, was her foster daughter, and was not then engaged to, although very much in love with, the young man in the case. That mother, like you, had reason to believe that the boy, who was greatly attracted to the girl (a beautiful, intelligent, popular creature), was thoughtlessly taking advantage of her love of him.

Indeed, she had talked with the girl—after a particularly disquieting incident—and had won the admission that her fears were warranted, even though the youngsters had not yet transgressed the laws of morality. As a result of this talk, the girl had promised to keep faith with her mother's expectations of her. But the mother was still greatly concerned for her, nevertheless, because she feared the girl's great love of the boy might prove her undoing. And she was frank to say that she believed the girl cared more for the boy than he did for her.

So she came to me to ask, "What to do?" In honesty, I must say that I have long since forgotten most of the details of our conversation; or what conclusion we arrived at; or what specific recommendations I may have made. But here is what I wish to report: About six months later this mother appeared again at my desk. Her face was radiant. She had come to the newspaper office to leave an announcement of her daughter's engagement to the young man. They were to be married in six weeks, and were to leave immediately thereafter for South America on a most interesting assignment, that represented professional advancement for her husband.

Because I had forgotten what course of action we had agreed upon as wisest—since my conscious mind keeps virtually no record of the problems that pass over my desk, day by day—I asked her to tell me what she had done. She said, in effect, that with her daughter's consent, she had talked to the two young people together—simply and directly and sympathetically. And she had put up to the boy the proposition of helping her daughter to keep the record straight—after giving him to understand, as one adult to another, that she fully comprehended the nature of the problem with which they were coping.

She took the sane, objective stand that unless he could show this much cooperative responsibility in the situation, she (the mother) could not in conscience continue to place the stamp of approval upon their friendship; could not continue to welcome him into her home—as she had been happy to do in the past, and hoped to be able to do in future. She affirmed her faith in the essential fineness of both of them, mentioned her guardian's obligation to look out for her daughter's welfare, and said that her primary purpose, in discussing the problem, was to be of help to them in getting the long-range perspective on their current relationship.

That talk, which she deftly guided into a serious yet friendly round-table discussion, marked a turning point in the boy's attitude toward both the girl and her mother. He fell deeply and devotedly in love with the girl, almost immediately; gave up his other girls, and asked her to marry him. Whereas he, like the boy in your case, had been somewhat hangdog in his manner toward the mother before, now he made her his friend—showing her many thoughtful little attentions and bringing his mother to meet her.

"He actually seemed grateful," this radiant-faced mother told me, "that he had found someone to talk to about his emotional problem; some older person whom he felt understood—and cared. Oh, I'm so glad that I was able to take the attitude I did—because it has brought so much happiness to all of us. He's just a wonderful boy, and I thank God on my knees every night that things have worked out so well for them; that they didn't make the mistake they were on the verge of making, and that—as a result of my visit to you—I rose above my fears and found the courage and the calm to discuss their problem with them in a rational way."

I am passing this true story (with its identifying data only slightly camouflaged) along to you, dear correspondent, because I believe it contains, by implication, more constructive suggestions for handling your problem than I could impart by an analytical discussion of the situation described.

M. H.

The Diamond Set

I

"I hear Barbara finally got her diamond."

"Yes, if you'd call it that."

"Wasn't it any good?"

"Only a half carat."

"Good heavens! Do you suppose she'll wear it?"

"Well I guess she figures half a loaf is better than none."

"I wouldn't be caught out with anything less than a carat."

"Me either. Did you hear what happened to Adele Preen?"

"Bob gave her only a fourth carat!"

"No!"

"Yes, and her mother made her send it back and tell him it wasn't big enough for her station in life."

"They did just right. After all, they're a very prominent family."

"Yes, and think how disgraced she'd feel among all her friends——"

"Yes, and her sisters. There's not a one of them who has less than a two carat."

"Men are so dumb. They never think of those little things."

II

"Did you see Estelle's new diamond?"

"No."

"Honestly you never saw anything like it. It's 4 carat—as big as a robin's egg."

"Margie Digges has one as big as a walnut."

Estelle's really looks more like an ice cube. It's the biggest thing you ever saw I want to tell you, and the little stones around it are not even chip diamonds."

"I wonder where Ted got the money."

"Well, of course I wouldn't want this to go any further but I understand he's still paying on it."

"Well, I may have only a two-carat, but at least it's paid for."

"Mine, too. Another thing, Margie's is really an inferior stone."

"So's Estelle's. If I were her I'd take it back and trade it in for a smaller one that was flawless."

"So would I. As a matter of fact I wouldn't want a diamond too big."

"Me either."

"No, the real fact of the matter is that nobody ever wears those gaudy big stones but vulgarians and millionaires."

III

"I wish you'd lamp that big headlight on Grace's finger."

"Yes, she says it's an heirloom in Arch's family."

"I bet it belonged to his first wife."

"Mabel's wearing the one Sally gave back to Claude."

"She was a fool to give it back."

"Yes especially since it was such a gorgeous stone."

"The one who really has the stone though is Maudie Stepp. It's a star sapphire."

"No!"

"Yes! White blue!"

"No!"

"And $5,000!"

"I can't believe it!"

"Yes, she told me herself. She said the star sapphires were so much smarter now that she just told George she wouldn't have any old two-carat diamond."

"Just the same I'd rather have my own diamond. It's not everyone can recognize the value of a star sapphire, but everybody knows a diamond is a diamond."

"I wonder if it's a real star sapphire."

"She says it is, of course, but I've yet to see the star."

"Let's go over and look at it."

"Oh she isn't wearing it today."

"Why not?"

"Well of course I don't know for certain—but they say it's in the pawn shop."

Evening Modes Follow Sports Wear Trends

Hollywood, Calif.—According to Howard Shoup, designer of Brenda Marshall's clothes for "Footsteps in the Dark," anyone can predict future evening modes by studying current play clotnes and sports togs.

Examples of sports clothes tested first in the play field and later elbowed into the evening scene are platform shoes, dirndls, beanies, suede jackets, bandanas, sweaters and camel hair coats.

And at this very moment, Howard continues, newer sportswear is stepping out after 7 p. m. disguised in rich fabrics and ornate trim.

Brenda, for instance, is wearing an all-sequined jerkin in deep blue over a black crepe gown.

Plastics Prevail in Summer Furniture

Summer furniture—which can hardly be called summer furniture any longer, so great has become its all-year-round use—is having its largest showing of the year in the markets at this time. Plastic, rattan, hickory and wrought iron furniture in their newest guises are planned for both indoor and outdoor use, and for the city apartment as well as country house. Rattan comes indoors completely in certain deeply upholstered pieces, and so does some of the new hickory.

Plastics combine with clear finish maple for apartments, groups and outdoor furniture in general follow the lines of indoor pieces more noticeably than they have before. Wrought iron makes news with period designs and the use of color. New pastel shades as well as white will grace smart lawns and gardens in the summer of 1941.

BEWARE NOW OF EPIDEMIC COLDS!

Here's Some Good Time-Tested Advice

With folks all around suffering with contagious colds, be just as careful as you can—and you may avoid a lot of sickness, trouble and worry.

Follow these simple rules of health: Live normally. Avoid excesses. Eat simple food. Drink plenty of water. Keep elimination regular. Beware of wet feet and drafts. Take some exercise daily—preferably outdoors. Get plenty of rest and sleep.

Then use these two time-tested treatments when needed.

AT THE FIRST SIGN OF A SNIFFLE, SNEEZE OR NASAL IRRITATION... put a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril right away. This helps to prevent many colds from developing, because Va-tro-nol is expressly designed to help Nature's own defenses against colds. (If a head cold causes stuffiness, you'll find that a few drops of Va-tro-nol helps clear the clogging mucus and makes breathing freer and easier.)

IF A CHEST COLD OR COUGHING COLD DEVELOPS (some colds get by all precautions) depend on Vicks VapoRub to relieve miseries. Rub VapoRub on throat, chest and back and cover with a warmed cloth. VapoRub acts to bring relief 2 ways at once. It stimulates surface of chest and back like a warming poultice. At the same time it releases helpful medicinal vapors that are breathed direct into the irritated air passages.

Both Va-tro-nol and VapoRub have been tested through years of use in millions of homes. When you use these two medicines you are not experimenting, you are not taking needless chances. Remember: If the condition of the cold fails to respond quickly to treatment—or if more serious trouble is indicated—call your family physician right away. In the meantime be prepared! Get a bottle of Vicks Va-tro-nol and a jar of Vicks VapoRub today.

Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

The one Federal employe who has never received a salary check like the other 1,100,000 Government workers is President Roosevelt. But the President has collected $75,000 each year since he has been in the White House. To get paid the President technically has to file a claim with the General Accounting Office for services rendered. GAO, however, automatically prepares the "claim on the last day of the month which entitles the President to recover not more than $6,250 from the United States Treasury.

GAO sends the "claim" to the Treasury Department where a settlement warrant is issued. Comptroller General Lindsey Warren and William A. Julian, Treasurer of the United States, both sign the settlement warrant. A special messenger takes it to the White House. Reason for the red tape is the fact that the President has no superior officer in the Federal service. All payrolls are supposed to be certified by superior officers.

A little incident that occurred at the departmental reception at the White House last week should nip reports that Col. Philip Fleming is being transferred from Wage and Hour.

President Roosevelt stopped the reception line when the wage and hour administrator appeared. He whispered to the colonel in a voice that was easily overheard:

"I just want to let you know," the President said, "that I think you are doing a grand job."

Several prominent New Dealers are understood to be alarmed over the number of New Yorkers who are holding important jobs in Washington. Ed Flynn, himself a New Yorker, is said to have taken the complaint direct to the White House. The chairman of the Democratic National Committee has been mobbed with demands from Westerners that they be given a few jobs here. Flynn is reported to have promised the West, which has always been for Roosevelt, its share of patronage. Westerners have been particularly peeved about the National Defense Commission where they have received few jobs.

Mark McCloskey, chief of the recreation and community activities of New York City, will head the recreation division of the health and medical division of the National Defense Commission. His job will be to organize community recreation at Army cantonments and defense areas. He'll work under Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt . . . The Defense Commission has aided in the drafting of a bill which would permit Federal Housing Administration to expand its defense housing work. The bill will be introduced in Congress next week . . . The GPO employes referred to here the other day were all retired at 65. The ages given were lengths of service.

A local politico who has a hunch that the illness of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen will force his resignation is trying to drum up support for the job . . . The three Civil Service commissioners will speak at a celebration of Civil Service Week Wednesday night in North Interior Auditorium. Representative Robert Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee and N. F. F. E. national officers, Luther C. Steward and Gertrude McNally, also will speak. Fred Farrar and Daisy Rees will entertain . . . Congressional friends of Paul McNutt have a bill drawn which would make Federal Security a department and McNutt a cabinet member. But the bill is yet to get White House approval.

Don't get excited if you see ladies' dainty underthings being displayed at the Wage and Hour Division. It's really the division's business to know what each garment is made of. And that's just the start of a complicated story. The apparel industry has been a headache to Wage and Hour. Twenty-eight different wage orders have been issued. Even a dictionary of trade terms and classifications of garments have been issued by the division to guide its inspectors. The wage scales range from 32½ to 40 cents. Makers of cotton shirts, for example, may have to pay their employes 32½ cents an hour. But if the shirts have rayon button-holes, the workers may have to be paid 35 cents. Garment makers who believe the wage scale set by the inspectors are too high bring samples to the division to try to prove their cases.

Grocery Safe Stolen; Two Cafes Robbed

Thugs Relieve Six of Cash In Different Sections of D. C.

District crime was on the increase over the week-end as police reported a safe containing $200 was carried away from a chain grocery store, two restaurants robbed, a office broken into and half a dozen persons robbed by bandits.

The safe, 2 feet square, was carried away from the Giant Market at 3509 Georgia Avenue Northwest, according to Turman Kennedy, 768 Newton Place Northwest, head cashier of the store.

Police said entry was gained by breaking a window in a toilet at the rear of the store.

Several thousand dollars in Saturday receipts were saved from the thieves because the management had banked the money Saturday night with the aid of a police escort, according to Kennedy.

At the same time the thieves apparently entered the Giant lunch room next door, it was reported by Alexander Stavrakas, owner. Stavrakas reported $88 in bills and change missing from his cash register.

Unsuccessful were thieves who entered Lansburg's Furniture Store at 909 F Street Northwest by forcing a rear grating. Thomas A. Rota, assistant manager, told police the outer door of a 3-foot safe was ripped, but the burglars were unable to break into the inner compartment containing several hundred dollars.

The same thieves were believed to have broken into the Western Union Telegraph Company next door at 905 F Street by sawing a lock on the rear gate and break through a glass partition inside. Nothing was taken.

Lunch Room Looted

An undisclosed amount of money was taken from the Dairy Lunch at 431 Seventh Street Northwest, Edwin Cohen, owner, told police. Entry was gained by breaking through a side window.

Two men were held up at gun point. William Walker, colored, of 2444 Knox Place Southeast, told police, that he was held up by three colored men at the point of a .22 caliber rifle as he walked in the 3200 block of Fifteenth Street Southeast. He was robbed of $10. The three men were later arrested and identified by Walker.

Walter Brown, employed at the Spur Gasoline Station at 1220 New York Avenue Northeast, told police two white men held him up at gun point as he went into the basement to get a can of gasoline for the men who said they had run out of gas. Brown was deprived of $15 in bills and $12 in change from his overall pockets.

Victim of an assault and robbery was Joseph H. Harris, 912 G Street Southeast, who reported to police he was approached by two white men who asked him for a match on D Street between Sixth and Seventh Southeast, forced him into an alley and robbed him of $6 after beating him.

Two purse snatchings were reported to police to complete the ported to police. Helen Powers, 20, of Trinity College, told police her purse was snatched in front of 519 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest by a colored man. The purse contained $11. Rose Burligh, colored, of 1614 Fifteenth Street Northwest, reported her purse containing $1.50 was snatched from her in front of 1442 Corcoran Street Northwest.

Police yesterday also made three arrests. Louis B. Bord, 29, of 705 Sixth Street Northwest, was charged with housebreaking in connection with a series of strongbox lootings in the Savoy Theater, 3030 Fourteenth Street Northwest; the Savoy Flower Shop, next door, and the Stevens Hardware store, 2755 Nichols Avenue Southeast. Cash totaled more than $500. The arrest was made by Detectives B. F. Bean and James Kane. Two other men are also being sought.

Girl's Death Laid To Sleeping Potion

A girl identified by police as Fannie Fowler, 22, of 1020 Sixteenth Street Northwest, was found dead in her bed last night by another roomer. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said the girl apparently had died from an overdose of sleeping potion. An autopsy will be held today.

13 More Hurt in Traffic; Hit-Run Suspect Held

TRAFFIC VICTIM NO. 8—Frank V. Brogan, 40, of 4624 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, was killed Saturday at 7:10 p. m. when the car he occupied collided with another on New Hampshire Avenue at Eastern Avenue Northeast, as indicated by the Accident Prevention Unit diagram. Driver of the car Brogan occupied was believed by police to have been Harry E. Acher, 40, of the same address, who was unconscious at Emergency Hospital. The other car was operated, police said, by Isaac Wade, colored, 20, of Takoma Park, Md. The Acher car was pushed back 38 feet from the point of impact and the other car careened into a light pole, breaking off the top which fell across Brogan's body as indicated. Both Brogan and Acher were thrown from the car. The APU reported the Acher car bore a green inspection sticker; the other car none. The cars were too badly damaged for brake tests; the weather was clear and the streets dry. Wade, who was uninjured, was being held for coroner's action, and a companion, Lester Rozier, colored, 18, also of Takoma Park, who was injured slightly, was being held as a material witness

Thirteen persons were injured in District traffic accidents yesterday, one seriously, while a victim of a Saturday night collision, which brought death to his companion, remained in critical condition at Emergency Hospital.

A 21-year-old youth was arrested in connection with one of yesterday's accidents and charged with reckless driving.

Meanwhile Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald scheduled inquests for 11:30 a. m. today at the District Morgue for Washington's sixth and seventh traffic victims of the year: Walter Edward Moorman, colored, 47, of 1400 Twenty-eighth Street Northwest and William Carpenter, colored, 66, of 1709 Seventh Street Northwest. Moorman was struck by a car at Second and E Streets Southeast on Saturday and died the same day. Carpenter, who also died Saturday, was injured January 2 as he crossed Logan Circle.

A two-car collision on Branch Avenue Southeast sent Darel Parcell, 19, of 1320 Fifteenth Street Northwest, to Casualty Hospital with lacerations to the left side of the neck. His condition was listed as undetermined.

Parcell was riding in a heavy sedan driven, according to police, by Earl B. Wiley, 21, of 1820 Clydesdale Place Northwest, which sideswiped a car operated by Lloyd P. Goldsmith, 32, of 1711 Capitol Avenue Northeast. Police said both cars were traveling northwest on Branch Avenue.

Wiley, charged with reckless driving, was released on $25 bond.

Gerald A. Bayles, 36, of 1451 Park Road Northwest, and his wife, Marianne, 42, were slightly injured when the car he was driving struck a lamppost in front of 629 Massachusetts Avenue northwest. Bayles told police he was forced to the curb by another vehicle.

Pedestrian Struck

A two car crash at Ninth and Dahlia Streets Northwest sent Robert Dennis, jr., colored, 24, of 2447 Twenty-fifth Street Southeast, to Walter Reed Hospital for treatment. Police said the car driven by Dennis collided with one operated by Charles F. Ferry, 52, of Takoma Park, Md.

A pedestrian, Bessy Smith, 64, of 913 L Street Northwest, was struck, as she crossed K Street at Vermont Avenue. She was treated by a private physician for a fractured right wrist and an injury to the thigh. Police listed John F. Quinn, of 1021 Girard Street Northeast, as driver of the car.

Elsie Alley, 26, of 637 I Street Northwest, was hurt when she ran into the front of a street car, police reported. She was treated at Emergency Hospital and transferred to Gallinger.

Telephone Pole Knocked Down

The Saturday traffic victim still in critical condition is Harry E. Acher, 40, of 4624 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest. Acher was involved in a two car collision at New Hampshire Avenue and Eastern Avenue Northeast, which brought death to Frank V. Brogan, of the same address, the city's eighth traffice fatality of the year.

Charles Wheeler, of Kensington, was in a critical condition at Washington Sanitarium, Silver Spring, last night after the automobile in which he was riding knocked down a telephone pole and collided with another on the Old Bladensburg Road between Wheaton and Four Corners.

James Jingells, of Kensington, who police said was driving the automibile, was treated at Montgomery County General Hospital.

Jack Furman Freshour, 33, of 1212 M Street Northwest, was arrested on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident last night three hours after an automobile fled a smash-up in the 3200 block of M Street Northwest.

Police said three machines were damaged and two persons injured when the hit-run car crashed into a line of standing cars. The injured were Clara Woronoff, 45, wife of Bernard Woronoff, 2502 California Street Northwest, driver of one of the autos, and Alvaretta Young, 20, of 1346 Park Road Northwest, passenger in another car. Neither was hurt seriously.

The other drivers were John A. Biglin, 26, of 2515 K Street Northwest, and Pohn Godman, 31, of 1862 Wyoming Avenue Northwest.

Alphonse R. Rector, 38, of 2114 Third Street Northeast, suffered severe lacerations to the head and possible internal injuries when struck by an automobile at Fourth Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northeast. Driver of the car, police said, was A. M. Rogers, 38, of Fort Lee, N. J. Rector was taken to Casualty Hospital.

A two-car collision at Naylor Road and Alabama Avenue Southeast sent three passengers to the hospital. Larry Carr, 3, of 33 U Street Northwest, was brought to Gallinger Hospital; Lawrence Carr, 51, of the same address, and Raymond Carr, 25, of Forestville, Md., were taken to Casualty Hospital. Most seriously hurt was Raymond, who suffered head injuries.

The cars, according to police, were driven by Frederick W. Carr, of the U Street address, and Bernard J. Hollans, 25, colored, of Aquasco, Prince Georges County (Md.)

Call for Redheads Draws 100; 30 to Wear Green Uniforms

Redheads aren't rare. They're just highly rated.

A hundred of them, gloriously crowned by all shades of coloring from the naturally-born thing to the best tints the beauty shops can counterfeit, rallied here in one host yesterday.

The mass effect was that of a sharp sunset.

The employment problem caused the gathering. The fact that red hair sits well above a green uniform is the circumstance whereby the statistics on unemployed persons will soon show a decrease of 30 redheads.

Miss Patricia Uline Hill, 3135 Ellicott Street Northwest, designed the uniforms for ushers to wear in the Uline Ice Arena, to be opened January 28 at Third and M Streets Northwest. A call went out for applicants with red hair.

The sunset of color crushed against Miss Hill's front door early yesterday. One girl wrote that she was desperately in need of a job and, if permissible, would dye her dark hair red. Many girls weren't so conscientious about it. Bystanders got an education in what tints are the best.

Among the 100 were two red-haired twins, Teresa and Cecilia Rohan, 1005 Girard Street Northeast, and two pairs of red-haired sisters, Lelia and Margaret Clark, 101 Franklin Avenue, Silver Spring, Md., and Evalyn and Martha Merkle, 4113 Sheets Avenue, Brentwood, Md.

The interrogations were concluded in serenity. Redheads, en masse, proved even-tempered. The only suggestion of uneveness appeared in the suspicious looks some redheads gave to the hair of dubious redheads.

Mormon Leader and Rabbi Urge Support of Greek Relief

$5,000 FOR HOMELAND—The congregation of SS. Constantine and Helen Greek Orthodox Church all make $5,000 available to the Greek Red Cross, it was announced yesterday as the church marked St. John's Day in honor of Premier John Metaxas with prayers for America, Greece and Britain. ### Former Senator King Represents Latter Day Saints, Rabbi Gerstenfeld, the Jewish Faith, At St. Sophia's Orthodox Church

A Mormon statesman and Jewish rabbi yesterday urged support of the Greek war relief drive at a service in St. Sophia's Greek Church.

Speaking with Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, and Cimon Diamantopoulos, Greek Minister, former Utah Senator William H. King denounced the Axis powers as "foul, wicked and oppressive aggressors" and called Greece the "spirit, body and soul of people everywhere who love liberty and justice." He is honorary local drive chairman.

Delivering his talk despite a sore throat, Rabbi Gerstenfeld said he revered not only Greece's past glory but its present courage. "We must decide now," he said, "whether we will be free states in a federated union or slave states in continental slavery."

Achilles Catsonis, local drive chairman, announced that $10,000 was on its way to New York headquarters, and expressed hope that that much more could be sent this week. The local goal is $100,000.

The Greek Minister, whose remarks in native tongue were translated by Catsonis, thanked the participants for their cooperation and assured that there were no oppressed Jewish minorities living in his country, such as in certain other lands.

Nation Opens Birthday Ball Drive Today

March-of-Dimes Campaign Starts For $1,500,000 Paralysis Fund

A Nation-wide drive will be launched today to make January 30 a happy birthday for the world's most famous infantile paralysis victim—Franklin D. Roosevelt

In cities, towns and farm communities from coast to coast, energetic workers will put on their campaign hats to raise a $1,500,000 war chest for national defense against the mysterious malady that cripples thousands annually.

The campaign will open today with the annual March of Dimes. It will culminate in thousands of gay balls on the President's fifty-ninth birthday. On January 30 millions will dance so that others may walk.

Keith Morgan, national chairman of the Committee for the Celebration of the President's Birthday, told President Roosevelt in a telegram last night that the opening of the campaign will find a chairman appointed in every State and 2,700 counties.

Officials called for contributions exceeding last year's record-breaking total of $1,407,245. Fifty per cent of the funds raised will remain with local agencies for treatment of poliomyelitis victims — buying splints, braces, massaging tanks, occupational therapy devices, wheelchairs, "iron lungs" and sending sufferers to hospitals. The remainder will go to the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis for scientific study, epidemic aid and education.

The foundation, which was formed three years ago, has ladled out hundreds of thousands of dollars to hospitals and universities in an attempt to find methods of preventing and curing the enigmatic virus, which to date has kept its secret hidden from the medical profession.

Tuesday the Mile o' Dimes counter, which collected $17,000 last year, will open at the corner of New York Avenue and Fourteenth Street Northwest.

That afternoon Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt will give a party at the White House for the women leaders of the campaign. Grace Moore, the singer; Mrs. Claude Wickard, the wife of the Agriculture Secretary, and a 9-year-old Washington girl, Dolores Francis, a patient at Children's Hospital, will take part in a radio broadcast with Mrs. Roosevelt at 4:30 p. m.

The committee for the celebration of the President's birthday will give a dinner to the women campaigners Tuesday night at the Carlton Hotel. Prominent physicians from various parts of the country will speak.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Civilization may not be doing so well in the light of what's happening in other hemisphere but, chums, the progress in sports is getting to be wonderful.

We are reminded of that, particularly, by the 18-hole round of 62 that Benny Hogan threw at his opposition the other day in the $5,000 Oakland golf tournament. On the same afternoon, five other players fetched home cards of 66 on the par 70 course. The modern good golfers are making courses stand still while they take them apart.

POVICH

Par golf isn't nearly good enough to win a big tournament these days. Time was when par golf was supposed to be the epitome of skill on the links, but it has come to be a misnomer. The mere par golfer is in the second flight of modern pros, and he's wasting his entry fee in tournaments.

Once upon a time they blamed the modern wave of par-busting on the improvement in clubs. When the sand wedges and the matched irons came in, it simplified the game for folks with something of a sound swing. But brother, when you have shot a 62, you have had no use for a sand wedge, because you haven't been in trouble, at least not much, so most of that argument is out.

The chances are that the explanation will be found in the fact that there are more golfers and that the game has attracted the big, strapping men who can get the most out of a golf swing. Weight behind the swing never hurt anybody's golf game and save for Hogan, Paul Runyan and isolated others, you'll find that the big-shot pros are young giants.

A few years ago, if anybody had shot a 62 on a regulation course, we'd have had a right to ask, as did Shakespeare, on what meat does this our Caesar feed? But when 66's get to be commonplace in the big tournaments, the 62's are merely four strokes better.

It's the old step-up system that seems to have set in in sports generally. Baseball, basketball and football have felt the effects of increased demands for skill. Only horse racing seems to have consistently defied improvement in performances. Equipoise's record of 1:34 2-5 for the mile was established ten years ago, and before that the record of Cherry Pie for the mile remained inviolate for the same length of time. Many of Man o' War's records still stand, and he was retired in 1921.

The same doesn't go for man's foot racing. A dozen years ago any college miler who ran the distance in less than 4:20 had turned in a nice job, but since then the mile has been run in 4:04.6 and six full seconds have been clipped off Paavo Nurmi's best time for the distance. Similarly, a quarter mile in 50 seconds used to be nice going. Today no respectable track coach welcomes on the squad a boy who can't run the quarter in less than 0:50.

Ball players who could field well, infielders we mean, could stick in the big leagues for a dozen years if they could muster a .250 batting average. That was all that was expected of second basemen, third basemen and shortstops not so many years ago. But in modern baseball, the infielder who can't hit .300, or at least .290 is no more sure of his job than the next premier of France. Baseball is demanding that the boys hit as well as field.

A catcher could get away very nicely with a big league salary if he hit .260 and could catch well, but time has run out for that kind. Clubowners now look for batting strength behind the bat as they used to look for it from their first basemen and outfielders. No catcher who fails to hit .300 is rated as a real good catcher these days.

They've stepped it up, too, in basketball. Time was when every team had a center to get them the tap-off, two forwards to shoot the baskets, and two guards to defend the goal. But that kind of basketball passed out. Woe to the center and guards who can't shoot baskets almost as well or better than the forwards, and the same goes for the forwards who don't know how to play defense. They're not wanted on respectable basketball teams.

And how about football? If you were a running back there was always a place for you in the backfield. The kicking was left to the kickers and the passing to the passers, with the tackling cared for by specialists. But not today. If you are a running back, you don't get to play more than a few minutes unless you are a triple threater, and if you can't block you probably don't get to play at all.

A guard in football used to be just that—a guard. He was supposed to stop anything that came his way through the line and open a hole for his own backs. But they've introduced the running guard to football, and the fellow who can't pull out of the line and lead the interference is not much of an asset. As we were saying, it all comes under the heading of progress.

Harrison, Hogan and Dodson Tie at Oakland

Kovacs Trims Alloo for Dixie Net Title

New Champion

FRANK KOVACS

Californian Triumphs in Straight Sets

Score Is 6-0, 6-3, 6-2; Pauline Betz Wins; McNeill and Kramer Take Doubles Crown

By the United Press

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 12.—Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif., today won the men's singles championship of the seventeenth annual Dixie Tennis Tournament by beating in straight sets Eddie Alloo, Rollins College student who had blazed to the finals by upsetting the defending champion and the Nation's No. 2 ranking player. Kovacs won, 6—0, 6—3, 6—2.

Kovacs also got to the finals the hard way. He knocked over National Champion Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, in the semifinals. The rangy Oakland player went into this tournament with an earnest desire to win and showed none of the clowning tactics for which he was noted in Eastern play last year.

Pauline Betz Wins

Pauline Betz, of Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla., won the women's singles title. She beat Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke, of Brookline, Mass., 6—4, 6—3, in this afternoon's finals.

Alloo surprised the gallery by defeating defending champion Bitsy Grant, of Atlanta, in the quarter-finals, and Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, ranked No. 2 nationally, in semi-finals.

McNeill teamed with Jack Kramer, of Oakland, to win the men's doubles championship. They defeated Russell Bobbitt, Atlanta, and Frank Guernsey, Orlando, 6—1, 7—5, 6—3. McNeill's volleys and Kramer's overhead smashes were too powerful for their opponents.

Wins Ten in Row

Kovacs, rated No. 3 nationally among singles players, outclassed his smaller opponent in the finals. The big California youth won the first ten games, in which he put together one string of 21 consecutive points. In the first set, Kovacs made put three errors and Alloo earned only one point.

Alloo was helpless in his efforts to return Kovacs' hard top-spinning drives placed so accurately that they often powdered the court's white chalk lines.

Miss Betz—a favorite to succeed to the national women's singles championship which was vacated when Alice Marble turned professional—was never in trouble in her finals match with Mrs. Cooke. Miss Betz jumped into a lead at the start and stayed in front. She consistently zipped into Mrs. Cooke's backhand corner volleys that the latter could not handle.

Hogan Muffs 2-Foot Putt On Last Hole Of Rich Open

Trio Cards 276 Each In $5,000 Event; 18-Hole Play-Off Set For Today; Fan Hurt

By the United Press

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 12.—Little Benny Hogan of New York, Dutch Harrison of Little Rock and Leonard Dodson of Kansas City finished in a three-way tie for first place in the $5,000 Oakland Open Golf Tournament at Sequoyah Country Club today.

Each carded 276 for the 72 holes, four strokes under par. An 18 hole play-off was scheduled for tomorrow.

Hogan, who set a new P. G. A. competitive record with a spectacular, eight-under-par 62 yesterday, had a wide-open chance to take the $1,200 top money undisputed today, but he missed a 2-foot putt on the eighteenth green and slid into the tie.

Hogan got a 72, two over par, today. Harrison, the Arkansas traveler who has played a beautifully consistent game for three days, got a 73 to add to his 203 and Dodson, the surprise package of the tournament, carded a par 70. Going into today's round, Harrison's 203 had given him a one-stroke leadership over Hogan.

Tomorrow's play-off, starting at 1 p. m., will divide the first three purses of $1,200, $750 and $550.

Mark Frey, the home course pro, and Jimmy Hines of Great Neck, N. Y., had even par 280's, and get $325 each.

Marvin (Bud) Ward, of Spokane, former National Amateur champion, was low amateur with 282. He tied with professionals Jim Demaret, Houston, Tex., defending champion; Harold (Jug) McSpaden, Winchester, Mass., and Fred Wood, Vancouver, B. C.

The 283s were Denny Shute, West Newton, Mass.; Claude Harmon, Orlando, Fla.; Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y., and Herman Keiser, Akron, Ohio.

Tied at 284 were George Schneiter, Ogden, Utah, and Jim Walkup, Odessa, Tex. Lawson Little, San Francisco, and Lloyd Mangrum, Oak Park, Ill., had 285. Ernie Pieper, San Jose, was second low amateur with 288.

Sam Snead, of White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., who was in tenth place this morning at 211, complained of illness before he started his round. He played a few holes badly and tore up his card.

Fan Hit in Eye

By the Associated Press

One spectator casualty was noted as the country's leading linksmen fired their last shots. A ball hit by Denny Shute, former P. G. A. champion from West Newton, Mass., struck Leon Robertson, Oakland office worker, in the eye. Robertson was wearing double glasses which shattered in his left eye. Asplinter pierced the eye ball but his sight was not expected to be affected.

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 12.—Hec Pozzo and Eddie Prokop made in unbeatable scoring combination today, leading the Atlantic City Seagulls to a 5-to-4 victory over the New York Rovers in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League game at Madison Square Garden.

Lude Check, Rover center, gave the visitors what proved to be the margin of victory early in the first period by knocking the puck into his own net.

Pozzo took charge from then on, scoring three consecutive goals with Prokop assisting each time, to make the score 4 to 1 at the end of the second session. After the Rovers tied the score in the third on a pair of markers by Ed Dartnell and one by Red Tilson, Prokop took a pass from Leo Richard and bulled the winning tally past Substitute Goalie Arthur Boosarma with less than two minutes of play remaining.

Elmer Kreller scored New York's first tally. Dinty Scott was given credit for Check's error.

Orioles Turn Back Skeeters, 3 to 1

Baltimore, Jan. 12 (AP).—The Baltimore Orioles put across two goals in the final period tonight to win a 3-to-1 decision over the River Vale Skeeters in an Eastern Amateur hockey game.

The Orioles scored on Vitarelli's goal in the first period but River Vale tied it up in the second on Goodfellow's shot, unassisted. Grigor and Dill accounted for the Orioles' winning goals.

Hoppe Continues To Improve; Wants to Get Up

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 12.—Willie Hoppe, world three-cushion billiards champion, felt so well today that he wanted "to get up," attending physicians at St. Luke's Hospital reported.

The 53-year-old New York cue artist, who was forced to withdraw from a title challenge match with Jake Schaefer, of Cleveland, last Thursday because of influenza, is also battling pneumonia.

At noon today his temperature, which once reached 106 degrees, had dropped to 100. He told his physician he was "feeling fine." He spent a very comfortable night, hospital authorities said.

If he continues to improve, his physician said, Hoppe might leave the hospital soon, but he will be required to remain in bed for several days.

Baltimore Five Hands Brewers 28-22 Defeat

Clippers Take Early Lead in Pro Contest at Riverside

Washington's impotent Brewers trailed all the way and lost to the Baltimore Clippers, 28-22, in an American Pro Basketball League game before nearly 2,000 fans last night in Riverside Stadium.

The Clippers, who lost ten straight in the league before finally winning over Brooklyn Friday night, surprised the Brewers by taking a 13-5 lead in the first period with Allie Esposito leading the attack.

Mike Bloom, formerly with the Brewers and Howard Bollerman, former Baltimore center, met for the first time in their new uniforms and the battle was about even between the two 6-foot 6-inch former All-American centers, although Bollerman was scoreless while Bloom aided Baltimore's attack with three points.

The Brewers reduced the first period margin to 22-16 at the end of the second 15-minute period but Washington's foremost effort toward knotting the count was drawing within five points on two occasions, 21-16 and 23-18.

Trailing 23-18 with five minutes to play, the Clippers held the ball until Johnson counted with a set shot for their final two points. Washington's scoring ended with Arthur Zahn's foul shot.

Both teams missed a majority of the shots, the Brewers only counting six field goals by six different players. Whitey Wilson and Ben Goldfadden led the locals with four points each while Esposito counted seven for the Baltimoreans.

Reds Auerbach led the United Typos to a 43-31 victory over Arlington Macabees in a Heurich League preliminary.

Cawthorn Confers With Art Rooney And Bert Bell

Philadelphia, Jan. 12 (AP).—Picturesque Pete Cawthon, of Lubbock, Tex., conferred today with Bert Bell and Art Rooney concerning the job of head coach of the Philadelphia Eagles National League professional football team.

"We've been talking all day," said Bell, co-owner with Rooney, of the Eagles. "But we haven't come to any definite understanding as yet. There probably won't be anything definite for some time as Pete wants to go back to Lubbock and think things over."

Cawthon, who resigned recently as coach at Texas Tech, said he plans to leave here tomorrow afternoon. He arrived last night and was guest of honor at a party given by Bell and Rooney.

Chapman, Ferrier In Miami Amateur

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 12 (AP).—More than 50 amateurs, headed by Dick Chapman, of New York, national amateur champion, tee off here tomorrow in the annual Miami Biltmore men's golf tournament.

Another strong entry is Jim Ferrier, former Australian amateur champion. Earl Christiansen, Miami's golfing policeman, who lost the Miami Open amateur honors to Ferrier in an 18-hole play-off, was an entry. Others were Gus Novotny, defending champion from Chicago, and Wilford Wehrle, 1939 champion, also from Chicago.

Modern Golfer Belittled by 'Old-Timers'

By the Associated Press

Sarasota, Fla., Jan. 12.—Today's pro golfer—compared with that of a quarter century ago—is just an old Mother Hubbard with so many modern conveniences he doesn't know what to do, if you believe three "graybeards" here for the P. G. A. seniors tourney.

The top-flight linksmen of those dim days when a putter was a putter and not something that looked like the leg from a piece of modernistic furniture were far better players with far less equipment, said George Sargent, United States Open champion back in 1909.

"If golfers of 25 years ago had had clubs and balls equal to those now in use," he said, "they would have had no trouble in 'taking' competition of the caliber existing today."

The Atlanta professional who presides at Bobby Jones' home course (East Lake) grew reminiscent and his eyes shone. "In the old days," he murmured, "a golfer really had to know how to play his iron shots. The greens were small and nothing like the well-kept layouts now. You never knew what to expect of a putt then."

Said Jock Hutchison, former British Open title holder.

"All you have to do now is get the ball on the green. It was a different story when Greens sometimes resembled concrete."

Hutchison and Sargent shook their heads sadly and looked at their bulky equipment. Then they looked at Long Jim Barnes who collected the United States Open, British Open and several PGA titles during his heyday.

"Yeah," Barnes said, "it's a far cry from today's wide selection of matched clubs to the old timers' meager collection. Just give a young fellow seven clubs—any seven—and let him win a championship with the equipment."

Someone wanted to know who the greatest club-swinger was around the turn of the century and all three perked up just like that.

"Why the man who was six times winner of the British Open," Barnes said. "There never was a golfer like Harry Vardon."

And Sargent and Hutchison nodded, glad for the moment to forget the "good old days" when you were lucky if you could stay in the fairway.

Alice Marble To Play in Nassau

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 12 (AP).—Alice Marble, the blonde tennis star turned professional, said tonight she and Mary Hardwick, of England, would play a British benefit exhibition match before the Duke and Duchess of Windsor at Nassau February 12.

"We were both thrilled when the duke agreed to the plan," Miss Marble said. The court ace closed her first week of professional tennis with a 6—3, 6—1, victory over Miss Hardwick here tonight.

Jack Burke Captures PGA Seniors' Golf

Texas Pro Cards 142 Total; McLeod Ties for Sixth Place

By the Associated Press

Sarasota, Fla., Jan. 12.—Jack Burke used an old aluminum putter he made back home in Texas to stroke his way today to the National P. G. A. Seniors championship with a bang-up 142 total in the 36-hole medal play tournament.

The veteran Houston pro took the Bobby Jones course apart in hanging up a 4-under-par 67 to pick up the crown from Otto Hackbarth, of Cincinnati, who did not defend the title.

Burke's hot pace was too much for the other veterans—all more than 50 years old. He finished seven strokes ahead of Eddie Williams, of Chicago, who carded a pair of 37's and wound up with 149. Williams' 75 over the Sarasota Bay Country Club course yesterday tied Burke for medal honors. Par on the Sarasota course is 72.

Hutchison Cards 73

Jock Hutchison, sr., of Sarasota, former British Open and P. G. A. champ, was deadlocked with H. C. Hackbarth, of Little Rock, Ark., a brother of Otto Hackbarth, and Jack Gordon, of Buffalo, N. Y., in third place at 50 each. Hutchison fired a 73 today, while Hackbarth and Gordon collected 74's.

Willie Ogg, of Worcester, Mass., clipped one stroke from regulation figures in whacking out a 70 but he finished out of the money because of a first round 85.

The 52-year-old Burke served notice he was out for blood when he cut loose with a one under regulation 35 on the outgoing nine. He cinched the title with a sizzling three below par 32.

On the Home Stretch

Currently the Texas P. G. A. titlist, Burke also copped the California Open and some minor tournaments in his 35-year playing career. It was his first start in the P. G. A. senior event, however.

Suffering from a cold, Long Jim Barnes, of West Orange, N. J., could do no better than a sixth place. The one-time British and United States Open and P. G. A. champion put together rounds of 77—74 for 151 and tied with Fred McLeod, of Chevy Chase, Md., United States Open king in 1908, who added a par 71 today to his opening 80.

Extra! MacPhail Doesn't Pick Dodgers

By International News Service

New York, Jan. 12.—This may come as a startling surprise to most baseball fans but Larry MacPhail today was not sure that his Brooklyn Dodgers will win the 1941 National League pennant.

"It's too early to say for sure that the Dodgers will win," the Brooklyn Barnum declared upon his return to New York after a brief vacation in the South. "There still might be a number of deals made yet and the whole pennant outlook may be changed.

"The race shapes up like a very close affair. But roughly, I'd place the teams into two groups. In the first group, I'd put Cincinnati, St. Louis and Brooklyn.

"The second group will be Pittsburgh, Chicago, New York, Boston, and you might even add Philadelphia."

The Brooklyn president said he felt that the champion Reds are the team to beat, but that if they crack at the seams, they might fall out of the first division.

"The Reds are a pretty average ball club, outside of the pitching which is exceptional. But you never can tell how the pitching will hold together.

New York, Jan. 12.—Emerging from the haze of early-season battles, contenders for the various conference titles in college basketball throughout the country had begun to take definite shape today. This week's program should go a long way toward sketching in the full picture.

Leaders after the first full week of firing in the major circuits are Cornell in the Eastern Intercollegiate League, Ohio State in the Big Ten, Nebraska in the Big Six, Creighton in the Missouri Valley, "Dark Horse" Florida in the Southeastern, North Carolina's defending champions and Richmond in the Southern, Arkansas in the Southwest, and Southern California in the Southern and Oregon State and Washington in the northern division of the Pacific Coast Conference. In the Rockies' Big Seven, there's a three-way tie with one victory each.

Gene Tunney Promises Uncle Sam a Force Of Well Conditioned Pilots for His Warplanes

Ten Months Required For Cadets to Reach Top Physical Form

By the Associated Press

Pensacola, Fla., Jan. 12.—The United States Navy will have a well conditioned fighting force of cadets, a prime requisite for warplane pilots, former Heavyweight Boxing Champion Gene Tunney declared today. He figures it will take ten months to condition a cadet.

"The armed forces realize from experience in the last war that pilots in good physical condition made more alert, receptive fighting men and on the whole gave a much better account of themselves than those not in first class condition," said Tunney, director of physical training.

Tunney, who combined physical fitness and two pounding fists into fame and fortune, is assigned to the job of seeing that pilots at the naval air stations here, at Corpus Christi, Tex., and at Jacksonville, Fla., attain the proper condition.

"The Secretary of the Navy put it bluntly and appropriately when he said, 'All members of the Navy must work to attain that physical fitness so necessary to fighting men,'" he emphasized.

The Cadet Battalion, Tunney said, includes some of the Nation's top athletes. One of his assistants, Ensign J. W. Stack, was captain of the 1939 Yale football team.

"It is not our purpose to make athletes as such out of them but to give them enough exercise, sports and games to give them a firm

Alvis Seeks Zale for Bout Here Feb. 11

TONY ZALE

Offers N. B. A. Champ $10,000 to Defend Title Against Abrams at Uline

Undismayed by a pair of financial reverses in previous ventures, Ray Alvis yesterday announced he's ready for another try at the Washington fight game—this time in the newly-completed Uline Ice Arena.

Alvis said he has wired Sam Pian, manager of Tony Zale, National Boxing Association middleweight champion, an offer of $10,000 for a title fight here February 11 against Georgie Abrams, Washington middleweight.

Alvis said he already has an option on the services of Abrams and that he has the necessary financial backing.

The rotund fight promoter whose Abrams-Henry Chmielewski venture at Riverside Stadium recently was a financial disappointment reiterated his intention of staging boxing shows on any date he can line up top-ranking fighters. The Uline arena will seat 8,000 for boxing, he said.

Abrams, who looked every inch a champion in knocking out Chmielewski last October, has been steadily going up the N. B. A. ladder and has won his last two fights since beating Chmielewski. He has won decisions over the Cocoa Kid and Izzy Jannazzo.

Scheduled to fight Jimmy Leto in Baltimore tonight, Abrams yesterday was notified he'll get another week's rest. Leto begged off because of an illness and the Baltimore fight has been reset for a week from tonight.

Alvis' wire to Pian in Chicago yesterday stated:

"Offer Zale $10,000 cash with privilege of 37½ per cent of gross receipts to defend title against George Abrams in a 15-round bout at Uline's Arena Feburary 11. Will deposit cash with local boxing commission upon acceptance."

Nova to Get Shot at Louis In March

Jacobs Says Lou Can Have Fight if He Wants It; Carlin Angry

By the United Press

New York, Jan. 12.—Promoter Mike Jacobs announced today that he will give Lou Nova a title shot at Joe Louis in March at Madison Square Garden, if Nova wants the match.

This announcement irked Ray Carlen, Nova's manager, who is demanding a contenders' battle with Billy Conn for the right to a big outdoor fight with Louis in June.

"Gosh! That's a brand-new one," Carlen said. "Jacobs is using Louis, the world champion, as a policeman to protect his fair-haired boy, Conn, from getting mussed up by Nova.

"Nova can draw as much money fighting Conn at the Garden in March as he could draw in the Garden with Louis. The Garden can hold only so many people, and the same $25 tops could be charged for either bout. Both Jacobs and Conn's manager, Johnny Ray, gave us their words that Nova would get a 'Conn fight if he beat Pat Comiskey last Friday night. Nova murdered Comiskey, and now they are trying to give him the runaround."

Jacobs said that it will be impossible for Nova to fight Conn before June because Conn already was signed for a June title shot with Louis. Jacobs insisted that it would be impossible for him to break this contract with Conn.

However, Mike said he will assure Nova of an outdoor title shot in September with the Conn-Louis winner, if Nova doesn't want the indoor shot with Louis in March.

Welters Meet In Rematch Here Tonight

Pair Fought to Draw Last Week; 4 Other Bouts on 'All-Star' Boxing Program

Wild Bill McDowell, curly-haired fighter from Dallas, Tex., will attempt to put Richmond's Joey Spangler in his place tonight at Turner's Arena and the odds are that he'll do it.

Wild William has an idea that Joey's place is flat on the canvas, but whether he'll be able to follow out his belief depends on just how much time he chooses to devote to clowning.

They meet in what amounts to the main event on a card featuring three eight-round fights.

Fought Draw

McDowell and Spangler only last Tuesday fought to an eight-round draw at the arena, but it was a fight which saw Wild Willie having himself a time by taking half swings at the Richmonder after the bell sounded the end of each round.

Spangler, however, kept McDowell busy the entire eight rounds. The Richmond fighter was undefeated in nine straight fights until last week's draw.

In the other eight-rounders tonight, Promoter Joe Turner is importing a flock of new talent.

Up from Mexico he's bringing the pride of the Villas, Manuel Villa, so-called Mexican welterweight champion. Manuel, whose brothers Packo and Pancho are rather well known in the feather and bantamweight divisions, has never fought in the United States. He'll fight Gene Buffalo, Philadelphia colored boy who's returning to Washington for the first time in three years.

BILL McDOWELL

Another "Champion"

In the third eight-rounder, Turner's producing another title-claimant—this time Victor Corchado, who says he's the featherweight champion of all Puerto Rico.

Vic will run into the snappy style of Billy Banks, the U Street fashion-plate whose local build-up was a slight flop as a result of his defeat by Joey Archibald.

The four-round preliminaries beginning at 8:30 p. m., bring out Carroll Alexander, recent graduate of the amateur ranks, against Baltimore's Vince Truminello, and Roy Dunn against Baltimore's Bobby Stone.

Announcement of the appointments was made by Dr. John J. Tigert, president of the university.

While definite assignments were not announced, it was believed Mullins would take over the backfield coaching position and that Dermody would handle the ends.

Mullins and Dermody were given two-year contracts. Mullins was also made a professor of physical education and Dermody an assistant professor.

Bettina Seeks 175-Lb. Title In Bout Tonight

Anton Christofordis Is Rival in N. B. A. Approved 15-Rounder

By the United Press

Cleveland, Jan. 12.—Melio Bettina, Beacon, N. Y., belter, will attempt tomorrow night to regain the light-heavyweight title—or that part of it recognized by the National Boxing Association—when he meets Anton Christoforidis.

The title tilt is sanctioned by the N. B. A., which has declared it no longer recognizes Billy Conn as the champion.

Betting odds of 6-5 favored Bettina tonight as fight followers regarded the 15-round bout as pitting the rugged strength of the Italian southpaw against the speed and left hand of the Greek fighter.

The title bout received a tremendous boost in interest when Mike Jacobs, New York promoter, characterized the match as a "phoney title fight" and engaged in an exchange of threats of law suits with the Cleveland promoters, Bob Brickman and Ben Goetz.

Bettina, holder of the crown before he lost it to Conn, finished training today and appeared in top condition at 174 pounds. He is expected to outweigh Christoforidis by 7 pounds.

Joe Triner, N. B. A. president, will present the winner with the "heritage belt," emblematic of the championship and once worn by Gene Tunney.

According to an N. B. A. ruling, the fight cannot end in a draw and the winner must defend his title within 60 days against Gus Lesnevich, of New Jersey.

Regal Soccer Team Wins, 3-1, Over Baltimore's Canton Pool

D. C. Lads Take Stewart Cup Match, but There's Doubt as to Just What Victory Means

By Al Hailey

The Regal Clothiers are a step nearer the amateur soccer supremacy of the U. S. A.

They are that way because yesterday they defeated the lads from old Canton Pool, of Baltimore, 3 to 1, at Gonzaga field in the Stewart Cup series play.

This cup, it develops, is emblematic of the United States amateur championship—according to local soccer authorities.

It must be a pretty important dish at that, for the 22 men out on the field appeared to have little love for one another. In fact, less than two minutes after we skidded to a halt at Gonzaga, they took Baltimore's Frank Schorr off the field with a couple of broken ribs.

It seemed that a Regal player, in his zeal to get in a kick at the ball in midair, misjudged the ball and landed with both feet in the region of Frankie's solar plexus.

3 Brother Combinations

The Washington soccer team, with three brother combinations on it, appeared to be the more closely knit of the two high-strung organizations, and it was not until late in the second 45-minute period that the Canton Pool lads kicked across a score.

The Regals, however, with such characters as Capt. Ossie Cooksey and Hardrock Botts in the line-up, did some razzle-dazzle business in the second period that nobody was quite able to figure out, and in no time at all Bill Simonds had kicked two goals and Murphy Vermillion had added a third.

There was one fellow who kept dashing madly up and down the sidelines waving a handkerchief and making unintelligible noises, but we learned he didn't count.

A Secret Maybe

After some 15 minutes of running him to earth, we learned that he was a "sort of an official." Nobody knew exactly what to call him, and he might as well have been out having a liverwurst sandwich as far as we were concerned. In fact, we suggested that rather testily after the useless legwork.

Soccer in Washington has been without widespread recognition for so long that you'd have thought they were trying to keep it secret. As a matter of fact, when we approached several players between the halves yesterday they exhibited

Home-town college basketball players, boys who attended high school in Metropolitan Washington, have taken over the first three births among the District's high-average-per-game courtmen as the season hits the one-third mark.

Still leading the list by maintaining his average of 13.33 points for six games is American U.'s captain, Dutch Schulze, who has dropped in 80 points in the half-dozen contests although his team shows a losing percentage.

Gene Ochsenreiter's high-scoring pace for the Maryland quintet is a threat to Schulze, as Gene, who has led his team in all of its five losing starts and scored nearly half its points, has pulled up with a 12.80 average. His 15 points against Penn last week were a big help.

Catholic U.'s sophomore star, Jimmy Mulvihill, also performing with a team yet to taste a victory, has topped his team's scorers every time out and boasts an average of 11.33 points per game. Schulze attended Western High, Ochsenreiter Rockville and Mulvihill St. John's Prep.

Matt Zunic, George Washington's outstanding courtman, has watched his average drop with eight points against Georgetown and seven against Richmond, but the New Kensington, Pa., shotmaker still leads in total points with 95 in nine games with another local youngster and teammate, Joe Comer, pressing him with 83 points, followed by Schulze with 80.

Meeting Tougher Opposition

Zunic and Georgetown's set-shot artist, Jim Kiernan, are the only other collegiate courtmen representing the seven local schools to show averages of 10 points a game or better. Zunic's average is 10.55 for nine games while Kiernan's is the same for seven contests. These boys have been meeting much tougher opposition, however, than the players whose averages are higher.

Kiernan, although his 74 point total is 21 points short of Zunic, leads in field goals with 36 while he has made only two foul shots compared to 27 for the G. W. leader.

Bill Bornheimer, G. U.'s sophomore center, was held scoreless by G. W., playing only 15 minutes of the 40-minute contest, and his average dropped to 8 points per game, second on the Hoya list and nearly 2 points better than Buddy O'Grady's 6.42.

Zunic and Comer are being pressed for Colonial scoring honors by a team member who wasn't even in the starting line-up as the season started. Eddie Amendola, but who has led his team's attack in four out of its last five games. Amendola has now averaged better than 8 points a game while Bobby Gilham, who was off to a great start, has scored only 8 points in the last four games.

Three members of Doc White's Wilson Teachers College five, Ernie Cole, Hal Ifshin and Ray Holben have alternated as the Owls' chief point-getters and are closely bunched with 58, 54 and 50 points, respectively, each playing in six games. Cole's average of nearly 10 points per game is best.

Gus Frizzell, all-Maryland scholastic player last year and an outstanding freshman star with Staff Cassell's American U. Eagles, is second to Schulze, having found his eye on the trip last week on which the Eagles lost two out of three. His 49 points in six games top big Bing Byham by a single point.

Weingold Heads Blue

Hal Weingold, left-handed shot on the Gallaudet quintet, hit the hoop with consistency in the Blue's week-end tilts and moved to the head of Coach Blair Smith's scorers with 48 points in eight games, exactly eight markers per game. Carmen Ludovico is a close second with 45 points.

Gene Daly, the only holdover letterman on Coach Cotton's C. U. quintet, is an expert defense man but he has totaled 18 points in three games to trail Mulvihill among the Cardinals individual scorers.

Ochsenreiter is the only consistent point?maker at Maryland, Art Woodward's 23 points second to his teammate's 64 in five games.

Two of the boys with the best averages will meet this week, Ochsenreiter and Kiernan when Georgetown and Maryland get together at College Park Friday night. G. W.'s point stars will be busy on foreign courts while Schulze will stand on his laurels until January 31 as A. U. halts its schedule for examinations. Mulvihill seems the best bet to improve his average as the Cards move against three opponents, with Loyola, of Baltimore, the strongest of the three. The Wilson players are likely to have a field day with four games here this week, two in their own gym where Cole, Ifshin or Holben are liable to knock off 20 points apiece.

N. B. A. President Sees Peace in Ranks of Boxing in 1941

Triner Hopes to Get Jacobs to Agree to Angott-Jenkins Fight

By Steve Snider
United Press Sports Writer.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—A smattering of common sense applied to the prizefight business worked a miracle today fir the National Boxing Association. There was peace in the ranks and it's wonderful.

Some more of that common sense, said President Joe Triner, could heal the confusing breach between the New York commission and the N. B. A.

A new administration moves into the statehouse tomorrow and Triner soon may be forced out of his job as chairman of the Illinois commission. He will remain as N. B. A. president until his term expires next winter, however, and aim No. 1 is to achieve some sort of an agreement with the New York board.

"It's an unhealthy situation," Triner said. "In two divisions each of us has a champion. We have

LEW JENKINS

Sammy Angott on the lightweight throne and Tony Zale as middleweight champion. New York recognizes Lightweight Lew Jenkins and Middleweight Ken Overlin.

"We're going to try Tuesday to settle the lightweight dispute. I think a match between Angott and Jenkins can be made and that will clear up half the problem at least."

New York long has declined an invitation to join the N.B.A. on the grounds that such a union is contrary to rules of the New York commission, which prohibit affiliation with a national group.

"A common sense solution that is an N.B.A. offer to include a member of the New York Association on our national rating committee," he said. "If New York has a voice in the ratings of logical contenders there would be no misunderstanding of who is champion and who is a contender."

The N.B.A.'s common sense theme this week settled controversies in four divisions—middleweight, flyweight, featherweight and lightweight.

Until the last N. B. A. convention, all titleholders were required to defend their title once each six months or be stripped of their crown. Lou Ambers lost his N. B. A. title that way, although New York

DeploresLightweight, MiddleweightMuddle; Wants an Agreement

the ring. If he fails to defend the championship, he is suspended in all the N. B. A.'s 34 States, thus cutting his earning powers. When he agrees to defend his championship, he is reinstated.

During the last week four champions were notified their six months' limit either had expired or was about to and today all four were more than anxious to sign for a title defense.

Middleweight Champion Tony Zale met and defeated Steve Mamakos Friday night. Angott, recently operated on for a hand ailment, is ready to sign with a logical contender. Featherweight Champion Petey Scalzo already has agreed to meet Chalky Wright in Washington, D. C., this February and Flyweight Champion Little Dado, of the Philippines, has offered to meet a contender in Hawaii next month.

Common sense, it's wonderful.

Columbus to Renew Ring Relations With South Carolina

Entirely New Fight Card Announced

Explorers Open Card Saturday in Columbia Against Gamecocks; Fight C. U. Feb. 22

With exception of featured match with the February 22 date with Catholic University—Columbus University boxers this year are presenting an entirely new schedule, Dean John R. Fitzpatrick announced yesterday.

The Explorers, with four matches on the 1941 schedule and one date yet to be filled, will open a two-year relationship with the University of South Carolina Saturday night in Columbia.

The Gamecocks, Southern Conference champions who only last Saturday night were defeated by Maryland, 6-2, will come to Washington next winter to face the Explorers. Relations with the Carolinians are being resumed after a seven-year layoff. The last meeting between the two teams was in the old Strand Theater on Ninth Street.

Meets Arkansas Tech

Columbus meets Arkansas Tech February 1 at Turner's Arena in the first local match. fights The Citadel at Turner's on February 8 and has February 15 still open.

On George Washington's birthday, the Explorers meet the Cardinals at Brookland gymnasium. The match with Catholic University last year marked the first meeting of the two local schools in the ring and set a record for attendance.

A strong and much-feared fighting outfit in previous years, Coach Jim McNamara's boys had only a mediocre season last year. They defeated Kentucky, drew with Louisiana Tech, lost to Miami and were defeated by C. U. in a spectacular finale.

McNamara will be starting almost from scratch this year. He lost seven veterans by graduation and has only two returning.

Only 2 Veterans Return

Only Lou Taub, part-time featherweight last season, and Charley Cox, 1940's 155-pounder, will be back this year.

Cox is moving up a step this year to replace the hard-hitting Bill Crum. Lost this year, in addition to Crum, are Abe Cohen, the heavyweight knockout artist who gave C. U.'s Jay Turner such a sensational battle in last year's match; Lou Hayman, 175-pounder; Buddy Lazear, the best welterweight in local college boxing history; Len Lerner, a bantam, Stanley Stephenson, 135-pounder, and Phil Appel, another 118-pounder.

McNamara plans to run off an elimination tournament before his squad leaves Friday for Columbia, S. C., in order to determine his lineup. Here's how the squad shapes up at present:

125 POUNDS—Lou Taub, who figures to be considerably improved over last year, when he boxed two matches with a fractured jaw.

135 POUNDS—That's a toss-up between Bernie Jackson and Tom Leach, both rookies.

145 POUNDS—Anybody who fights here will have a tough time living up to Lazear's record, but Elmer Jacobson and Buddy Lyons are both good prospects.

155 POUNDS—Johnny Cuddy, a rookie, is contesting with Max Coe, who has some second-string experience, for this position. Both men can punch, with Cuddy given a slight edge.

165 POUNDS—Charley Cox, who fought as a middleweight last year, is moving up a notch to replace Crum. Cox's closest competition is Bill Graham.

175 POUNDS—Replacing Rube Hayman here in Red Doherty, a tall, stringy gent with plenty of kick in his hands.

COMPLETE SCHEDULE

January 18—South Carolina at Columbia, S. C.; February 1—Arkansas Tech at Turner's Arena; February 8—The Citadel at Turner's Arena; February 15—Open; February 22—Catholic University at Brookland gym.

5,000 Assorted Anglers Open 99-Day Miami Derby

Norfolk Captain, Memphis Manufacturer Land Large Sailfish in Inaugural Casting

By the United Press

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 12.—The sixth annual metropolitan Miami fishing tournament opened today and it was tough on the fish, for about 5,000 sportsmen anglers participated in the curtain-raiser of the 99-day event.

They went out to the gulf stream in sleek, expensive fishing cruisers, they fished from piers and bridges and scurried about Biscayne Bay in outboards and tiny rowboats. Every nibble meant a chance at the 600 prizes worth nearly $20,000.

The first anglers to record their catches at the 40 official weighing stations told of a phenomenal run of sailfish and bonita, two of the 30 species of gamefish listed for the competition.

Among the first to become eligible for the rod and reel club's $2,000 sailfish trophy, one of the most sought after prizes in the tournament, were Capt. C. G. Willis, of Norfolk, Va., and Ira Allstadt, Memphis, Tenn., manufacturer. Willis got one of the biggest sails of the day, a 45-pounder that measured 7 feet, 4½ inches. Allstadt's sail weighed 38 pounds.

Officials said it would be 24 hours and perhaps longer before the results of the first day's competition could be tabulated, because the 40 weighing stations are scattered from north of Miami to the Florida Keys and TT Bahamas.

Most of the anglers today concentrated in the gulfstream, although boundaries in the competition embrace roughly about 3,500 miles of ocean and bay off here and the Bahamas.

Among the fish meat with which anglers deluged the weighing stations were many of the 30 species eligible for a prize, ranging from the barracuda to a little thing called a pompano.

Thousands of fish were boated today, but most of them were too small to stand a chance in the competition and were returned to the water in the interest of conservation.

The tournament, described as the world's largest, started in ideal fishing weather. A warm sun minimized the bite of a cool off-shore wind as a fleet of 142 gaily decorated fishing cruisers paraded down Biscayne Bay this morning at the official opening.

A record-breaking 200,000 anglers are expected to compete before the tournament closes April 20. An estimated 161,000 persons from the 48 States and several foreign countries took part in the comoetition last year.

Besides the sailfish trophy, the men, women and children anglers will be fishing for a silver trophy donated by the Duke of Windsor. First and second prizes will be awarded to the person landing the largest fish in each class, and there will be daily awards and citations for outstanding fish.

Pin Pummeling Bowman Brothers Are 'Striking' Pair

By the Associated Press

Billings, Mont., Jan. 12.—The bowling Bowman brothers, of Billings, may not look alike but they have a "striking" similarity.

Four years ago Ross Bowman bowled three consecutive 213 games. Within a week Cliff Bowman rolled three straight games, all with scores of 213. Their 1938 total pins at the end of a season of 87 games was the same.

This year, after 49 games, they again added up their total pins and found that each had 8,956. So down to the alleys they went to bowl off the tie. The result—each trundled a 236 and each had to strike out to achieve that score.

Bruins Victors Over Philly Pros, 58 to 51

Campbell and Cooper Lead Attack for Local Colored Five

With "Soupy" Campbell, and "Tarzan" Cooper in the lineup, the Bruins, colored professional five, defeated the Philly Pros, 58-51, yesterday at Turner's Arena, before a crowd of more than 1,000.

It was their third straight victory, the Philadelphia Crescents and the House of David quintets having fallen before their onward rush.

Leading 30-23 at the half, with Cooper tossing baskets from all angles of the court, and the elusive Campbell coming out of a dervish dance to count repeatedly, they drew away until the count stood 50-34.

Then "Butch" Weintraub, former N. Y. U. star, and "Mush" Silver, former luminary at Penn Military Institute, came to life, and, through their efforts, closed the gap rapidly.

Their rush, however, was overcome by the skillful shooting of Bill Lampkins, and heady play of "Reds" Briscoe, so that, except for "Heshie" Cohen's two baskets in the final minute of play, when the Bruins relaxed, the Quaker City tossers were unable to maintain the pace.

The Bruins will meet the Bridgeton (N. J.) Reds at the arena next Sunday afternoon, and will compete with the latter at night in Baltimore.

Cummings Wins Squash Crown

Pittsburgh, Jan. 12 (AP).—Lester Cummings of the New York Union Club today regained the National Professional Squash Racquets singles title by defeating Al (Scotty) Ramsay of the Cleveland Club, Cleveland, in five games.

Cummings won the first game 15-11, but dropped the second and third, 11-15; 8-15. He rallied strongly and swept the final two games, 15-12, 18-15.

Cummings bowed to Ramsay in the 1938 final round, but won the title in the National tourney a year later.

At The Post

Selections at Hialeah Park.

Dear Al:

Jockey Herbert Lindberg likes his Florida. He turned down an attractive offer to go to California to ride for Trainer Guy Bedwell. Lindberg, by the way, was born in Gotemburg, Sweden. He says he will ride out the season here and then go to Bowie. Jockey Leo (Skinny) Fallon, former contract rider for A. G. Vanderbilt, is a bit on the heavy side now and is galloping horses for Trainer Alex Gordon. If you see Art Brown or John Manfuso, tell them I'm coming along O. K. in that reducing league. I've taken off the apprentice allowance already. The 4-year-old chestnut gelding, Highola, well known around Maryland, died yesterday morning from a kidney ailment. Pat Farrell, former rider and jockey's agent, has joined the secretary's office staff here. He had Ira Hanford's book when the boy won the Kentucky Derby with Bold Venture. Hanford, an apprentice at the time, was the only "unfinished" rider to win the Louisville classic. Dr. H. J. Wollner, chief chemist of the Treasury Department, got in from Washington. He will participate in the convention of the Racing Commissioners to be held here next week. Red Mantilla was scratched last Saturday because of the death of Hugh G. Good. The stable, consisting of eight horses, raced in the name of Mrs. Good. G. C. Greer, of Belair, Md., claimed Cape Cod, winner of Saturday's fourth race. Greer has Oversight and other Maryland favorites. Muggins and Eddie have asked me to tell the Charles Town folks that they are doing O. K. J. Simpson Dean, president of the Delaware track is a visitor. Tom Thorpe, football referee and racing official, was discussing the Chicago Bears and their game against the New York Giants in which he worked. "Those Bears were plenty tough. Why on the first play they knocked over the 11 Giants and sent me sprawling in the bargain," laughed the genial Thorpe. They sing about June in January around here but for a couple of days it has been February in January. BILL.

First race—Miss I. Q. was second in her first start and promises to improve, off that effort. Has the speed to get to the top and I'm going to string along. Straw Flower has worked well and belongs in the money circles. Quick Conquest for the minor award.

Second race—Gay Balko ran two good races at Tropical and fits nicely in a sprint of this kind. Should make the most of the No. 1 post position. Wha Hae and Billy Bee have plenty of speed and will be in the thick of contention.

Third race—Oreus was second at the other track. Shapes up well in company of this brand and I see no reason for mistakes. Matchean is tossed in this with feather weight of 99 pounds and is dangerous. Mack's Hope may take care of the others.

Fourth race—Wise Bee has been away for some time but was consistent around New York last fall. Has worked well and may score at the first asking. Domkin may improve with the change of courses and is a threat in this company. Jayfcee for the minor award.

Fifth race—Air Brigade was second to Zacatine and deserves the call off that performance. Likes the route and is in good hands. Cadmium was a good one in the Midwest and should give a good account of himself in this field. War Bugle will draw a lot of play and is good now.

Sixth race — Dream Boat has taken two in a row and is likely to make it three in this field. Gets in light, thanks to the apprentice allowance. Close To and Sandy Boot seem to have something on the others.

Seventh race—Say Judge, winner of two at Rockingham, has been moving briskly in the morning and should do a lot of running. Peanut Lady gets a light assignment and is a threat. Spiteful could be the third one.

Eighth race—Paul Pry was third in a test at Tropical Park and looms as a dangerous horse at this route and under conditions. Needs only the right handling. Key Man and Fencing have speed and will battle it out if the top one makes mistakes.

Best bet—Gal Balko.

Stu Martin Signs Pirates' Contract

Pittsburgh, Jan. 12 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates have received a signed contract for 1941 from Stu Martin, utility infielder purchased from the Cardinals last December, the Pirates announced today.

Martin sent the contract for his first season with the Bucs from his home in Severn, N. C. In coming to Pittsburgh, Martin rejoins Manager Frank Frisch, under whom he served in 1936, 1937 and 1938 when Frisch was pilot of the Cardinals.

The 27-year-old infielder, a left-handed hitter, batted .238 for the St. Louis Club last season.

"We expect to have them all in excellent condition within 10 months through compulsory, 20-minute setting up exercises each morning and other optional sports including swimming, squash, tennis, softball and handball."

Tunney, now 43, won't take an active part in the actual physical training, however. His job consists mainly of coordination of the physical training with the flight program and other administrative duties that will keep him at his desk most of the time.

Hockey Eagles Renew Feud With Baltimore Orioles at Riverside Stadium Tomorrow

Ned Vitarelli, 146-pound wingman for the Baltimore Orioles, is one of the biggest reasons why his team is the defending chimpion in the Eastern Amateur League. Always at his best against Washington, Vitarelli probably will be a prominent figure in tomorrow night's match

By Jack Munhall

A new attendance record for local hockey is expected tomorrow night when more than 4,500 ball-ringing and player-baiting fans blanket Riverside Stadium to see the latest renewal of the intercity feud between the Washington Eagles and the Baltimore Orioles.

Confident that their team will soon overtake the pace-setting Eagles and storm to a second successive Eastern amateur title, Baltimore fans have bought large blocks of tickets for the match. And with "Elmer," he of the screamingly loud shirts and rickety-rack noisemakers, as cheer leader, the visiting fans hardly will be outdone in vocal velocity.

Tomorrow night's match will be more than an exhibition of evenly matched and hated rivals, for it will bring together two clubs fighting neck and neck for the league championship in a series that to date is all tied up. Five times this season the Eagles and Orioles have met and each has won twice, with one game a tie. Moreover, three of the games have been decided by the margin of a single goal and two extended into overtime.

Orioles Two Games Behind

Separatent from hte persistent defending champion Orioles by only two games, the Eagles will enter this match bent on developing a three-match winning streak during which they reached their offensive heights of the campaign.

With Nora Burns, Ross Knipfel, Mike Germann and Paul Corteau leading the way, Washington, despite a difficult schedule, has rung up 21 goals in its last three starts. Still the Eagles have not been able to shake off the Orioles, who have been bowling along behind the scoring of Ned Vitarelli and George Grigor, and the high-class goaltending of Frank Ceryance.

Baltimore is definitely the club Washington must beat and continue to beat if it is to bring home a title in its second year of play here. Just as last year, the Eagles are proving the only club in the league that even can hold its won with the Monumental City six.

Old 'Favorites' Return

This will be the first local appearance of the Orioles in more than a month and their mere presence on the ice will be enough to stir up considerable enthusiasm among Washington fans who delight in "riding" Ned Vitarelli, Guy Roach, Bob Dill and the other Oriole villains.

Vitarelli, one of the faster and smarter players of the league, is an especial hate of local fans and he exults in playing his best hockey against the Eagles. Witness the three goals and an assist that the colorful Italian poured into Baltimore's first 1940 decision over Washington.

Helping Vitarelli in the Baltimore line-up will be other well-known players such as Jack Riley, Jack Dyte, Bill Moe, Scotty Alexander, Kenny Partis, the former Eagle; Carl Ripley and Dan Couhlin, besides the aforementioned Grigor, Roach and Ceryance.

Riverside Stadium officials announced last night that in view of the unprecedented advance ticket sale for the match fans are advised to procure their tickets early. Reservations may be made through Republic 2950.

Rangers Top Americans By 3-1 Score

Winners Take Huge Lead in Race for MacBeth Trophy

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Each line of the New York Rangers scored a goal tonight as Frank Boucher's men soundly defeated the New York Americans, 3 to 1, before 12,534 fans at Madison Square Garden.

It was the second defeat in two nights for the luckless Americans and kept them pinned in last place of the National Hockey League. The Rangers took a 4-to-1 lead in games for the William J. MacBeth Trophy, emblem of the metropolitan championship, and need but a draw or another triumph to retain it.

For most of the game it looked as if Dave Kerr in the Rangers' nets was finally to get his first shutout of the year. But young Norm Larson punched in a goal at the three-quarter mark of the last period to spoil the effort.

Lynn Patrick opened the scoring in the first period and that lead stood until the third period when first Clint Smith and then Phil Watson beat Goalie Earl Robertson.

Bruins Rally To Beat Canadiens

Boston, Jan. 12 (AP).—The Boston Bruins wound up the first half of their National Hockey League campaign by battling from behind for a 7-5 victory over the Montreal Canadiens tonight before a 12,000 crowd.

While extending their undefeated string to eight games, the Bruins wiped out a 4-1 lead the visitors built up during the first 23 minutes of play.

Just as the second period closed, Woody Dumart rapped in the tying goal and during the third session, Herb Cain and Desse Smith countered to insure the Bruins their second victory over the visitors in as many nights.

The Bruins got off to a fast start, for Eddie Wiseman scored during the first 5 minutes, but Les Canadiens stormed back in determined fashion and drove four pucks through Goalie Frank Brimsek before little Bobby Bauer gave the Bruins their second tally.

Murph Chamberlain, who performed in such aggressive fashion that he drew two penalties, one for misconduct, scored twice for Les Canadiens and their other goals were provided by Ray Getliffe, Toe Blake and Tony Demers.

Each member of Boston's famed Kitchener Line accounted for a goal and the Bruins' hopes soared high when Milt Schmidt put them back in the game two minutes before Dumart deadlocked it.

Jack Crawford's goal, which reduced the visitors' lead to 5-3, was the first one that defenseman has registered this season.

a complete lack of interest in the game by suggesting that we roll dice.

We learned this habit is natural to the real soccer player.

Yesterday's match was the second round of the Stewart Cup series, but no one was absolutely certain what it meant.

"I think if we win today we play in other towns all over the country," a lad identified as Doug the Pug confided.

It develops that the local soccer lads, simon-pures all, play purely for the love of the game.

We recalled to a bystander that this was not soccer as we knew it as a member of the 7-B Aggies back in junior high, and he just snorted.

"These fellows are highly temperamental," he explained patiently. "They are so keyed up that all these hecklers up and down the sidelines can start a fight about anytime they please."

One of the aforesaid hecklers went into action at that moment with a neat array of disparaging remarks, and in no time at all there was a collection of soccer players pounding one another with wild abandon until Referee Heinie Heise broke it up.

"That's soccer for you," our bystander sighed happily.

U. S. Crowns Hinge on Tank Event Here

Two national championship events will mark the 10-event program of the D. C. A. A. U. swimming meet which will be held next Saturday in the Shoreham Hotel's Venetian Pool.

The junior United States title will go to winners of the 220-yard free style for men and the 440-yard free style for women. In addition, men's races will be the 100-yard breast stroke, fancy diving, the 100-yard back stroke and the 150-yard medley relay. Fair swimmers will also compete in the 100-yard back and breast stroke races, the 150-yard individual medley and the 50-yard free style.

Eleven powerful teams in this vicinity are expected to compete in addition to local aggregations.

Ted Williams Doesn't Expect Contract Trouble With Red Sox

Outfielder Praises Dom DiMaggio As Great Player

By the Associated Press

Duluth, Minn., Jan. 12.—Ted Williams, 22-year-old leftfielder for the Boston Red Sox, said today he didn't expect any contract difficulties with the club management over terms for the 1941 season.

Williams, who went to the Sox from Minneapolis of the American Association, has been visiting in northern Minnesota, and said he came here to spend a few days with friends. He plans to remain in this section until he leaves next month for the Red Sox training camp at Sarasota, Fla.

As to his 1941 contract, Williams said in an interview that "I know I won't have any trouble. The Red Sox management is fair. I haven't received a contract yet, but I'm pretty sure the club and I will be able to come to terms easily enough."

Likes Dom DiMaggio

"Jot this down somewhere where you won't lose it," he said. "Little Dom DiMaggio is a sure bet to be in next year's all-star game. He's a great kid, a sure-fire fielder and a dependable hitter—and that arm of his—I don't know where he gets the strength to throw 'em like he does, but I've never seen anything like it."

"That reminds me," he went on, "the more I play this game, the more I'm convinced that great players—great hitters, pitchers and fielders—are born, not made. Take hitting, for instance. A fellow can be taught just so much, but he has to have that quickness, sharpness and coordination, born in him to be able to step up there and hit regularly.

TED WILLIAMS

"Anyone who can hit .310 or better in class B, A or AA baseball can hit in the big leagues, provided he has no decided weakness. There's not a world of difference between the majors and the minors, except that those boys up there in the big time know how to do things just a shade better.

"There seems to be a division of opinion on night baseball in the majors," he continued. "Fellows like Cronin (Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox) and Cramer (Roger "Flit" Cramer, veteran outfielder) who never played much night ball, don't like it, but we who saw quite a bit of it in the minors don't mind it, as long as the weather isn't too bad. I don't find it much harder to hit at night than during the day."

St. Matthew's Five Defeated In League

St. Matthew's School tasted its first league defeat yesterday when it was nosed out by Holy Comforter, 14-11, at the Gonzaga gym in the Parochial League. In the thriller of the day, Holy Name eked out an 18-16 victory over a hard-fighting St. Martin team. In other games Sacred Heart defeated Immaculate Conception, 25-8, St. Joseph's had little trouble with the mites from St. Stephen's, allowing them only two foul goals and winning, 29-2; St. Michael defeated St. Aloysius, 13-7, and Blessed Sacrament beat St. James, 19-7. St. Thomas Academy drew a bye.

Ted Ellenwood Wins Eastern Skating Title

By the United Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Jan. 12.—Ted Ellenwood, of Fort Johnson, N. Y., today continued his habit of winning speed skating races and added the Eastern States championship to his twice-won Central Adirondacks title.

Ellenwood easily gained a 30-points lead over his nearest rival, Dick Werner, of New York, in the senior men's division with victories in the 440 yards and one mile events closing the two-day eet. He also cleaned the slate by winning the three-miles special race with a legnumbing pace. Each of the first three laps and the last on the six-lap track were clocked under 30 seconds.

Virginia Jahn, of Teaneck, N. J., won a close victory over Blanche Armstrong, of Saratoga Springs, for the senior women's title.

Rose Steininger, of Troy, and Arthur Van Dyck, a local boy, took intermediate honors. Ann Jones, of Saratoga Springs, and James Quinn, of New York, won the junior titles.

Ellenwood took the lead yesterday with a first in the 220 and a third in the 880, his only defeat. Miss Jahn edged ahead of Blanche Armstrong after winning the 880 yards final and placing second in the 220.

Senior men, 440 yards—Ellenwood, Wernear. Henry Flesh, Fort Johnson. 36 1-5.

One mile—Ellenwood, Herman Van Kutten, New York; Werner. 3:08.

Senior women, 440 yards—Jahn, Armstrong, Helen Carlesco. 43 4-5.

Intermediate boys, 1 mile—Joe Guinan, Saratoga; Richard Callahan, Schenectady; Robert Jahn, Teaneck, N. J. 3:12 3-5.

Intermediate girls, 880 yards—Steininger, Patricia Patnode, Albany; Dorothy Dyer, Saratoga Spring. 1:36.

Cleveland Barons Win

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 12 (AP).—The Cleveland Barons, leaders of the Western division of the American Hockey League race, halted the Buffalo Bisons' string of home victories at three tonight by achieving a 2-2 overtime tie on Earl Bartholme's goal 22 seconds before the final buzzer.

Bulldogs Win Title

Los Angeles, Jan. 12 (AP).—The Los Angeles Bulldogs won the Pacific Coast Professional League football championship today with a hard-fought 16-to-14 victory over the Hollywood Bears. A crowd of 13,000 saw the game.

Minneapolis Wins

Minneapolis, Jan. 12 (AP).—Minneapolis climbed to a second-place tie with St. Paul in the American Hockey Association standings by blanking its intercity rival, 4 to 0, before 3,500 fans here tonight.

Fort Hill High Wins

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 12.—A foul goal in the last 15 seconds of play gave Fort Hill High cagers a hair-raising 31-30 upset victory over the previously undefeated LaSalle High team in one of the wildest inter-city battles on record.

letting all the play get away from them. Seton Hall on Wednesday stacks its record of 34 straight against a Villanova club that has won ten in a row, and expects to pack the house; Bradley Tech, fresh from last night's 48-45 upset of Depaul, will be at Madison Square Garden the same night to tackle St. Francis while Depaul plays Long Island U. in the co-feature, and Duquesne, having beaten Loyola of Chicago for seven straight, will try to make it nine against Marquette Tuesday and Ohio State Saturday.

Lining up the conferences and sections, they look like this:

EAST—Cornell, having taken the E. I. L. lead by winning on the road over Yale and Penn, meets Columbia and Dartmouth's defending champions in two of the week's four league battles. The balance of the Ithacans' attack is shown in the fact they boast the circuit's five top scorers. Dartmouth plays Penn as well as Cornell.

New York U., its winning streak so convincingly ended by Penn State, "hits the road" to play Georgetown and North Carolina. After its upset win, Penn State in turn was thumped by Pitt last night, 36-27. An intersectional high spot will be Notre Dame's visit Saturday to the Penn palestra. Bradley and Depaul, after playing in the Garden, will meet Temple and St. Joseph's at Philadelphia on Friday.

MIDWEST—Ohio State, surprise Big Ten pacesetter on its conquests of Michigan and Northwestern, has one league game on tap, with Chicago tomorrow. Minnesota can catch or pass the Buckeyes if it can stop Iowa and Chicago. All ten teams play league games tomorrow night, with three more Saturday.

With Nebraska's single win over Kansas State putting it on top in the Big Six, this race is as wide open as a yawn. But Kansas State and its young coach, Jack Gardner, are the heroes of the moment for their startling 41-36 trouncing of Oklahoma last night, after losing six in a row. Missouri gets back into competition this week after a layoff caused by the "flu."

Creighton earned its role as Missouri Valley choice with a 41-17 walloping of Washington, added to a conquest of Washburn. Washington already had won from Duke and St. Louis. The Oklahoma Aggies, winners a year ago, started their league slate by downing Tulsa, 39-23.

SOUTH—Florida, Southeastern pacesetter, is idle this week after double wins over Georgia by two points Saturday, for a 5-1 record. Tennessee, though upset by Alabama's unpredictables, 27-22, still rates as a contender for Kentucky's 1940 title, and gets a chance to prove it against the Wildcats next Saturday. Georgia Tech has hung up five in a row against non-league rivals.

Victories over Washinington and Lee and V. M. I. boosted North Carolina's Southern Conference defenders into a deadlock with Richmond. The latter's five-game streak was snapped last night, 58-36, by George Washington, which plays South Carolina, Clemson and Furman this week. League highspot should be Tuesday's clash between the Tarheels and Wake Forest, surprise winner over Duke.

SOUTHWEST—Victory in a two-game series with a powerful Texas team shot Arkansas into the driver's seat. Texas opened its conference schedule by whipping Rice's title defenders, but the Owls came back last night to swamp the Texas Aggies, 68-34, as Frank Carswell came within a field goal of the league record with 34 points.

ROCKY MOUNTAIN—Colorado's Big Seven champs, nosed out, 41-39, by Colorado State, get a chance to come back against Denver and Brigham Young, winners of their league openers. State takes on Utah State and Utah.

PACIFIC COAST—Southern California, on a 56-35 score over U. C. L. A., leads the southern half, but meets a stiff test this week-end in two games with Stanford, winner in six of seven nonleague starts. The Uclans will offer California its first league competition in another pair of battles Friday and Saturday.

Petworth Wins, 48-21

Petworth basketball five won another yesterday as they defeated Company F of Hyattsville, 48-21, in the latter's armory. Joe Walters and Jimmy Howell starred for the winners with 13 and 11 points, respectively.

James Joyce, 'Ulysses' Author, Dies

Operation Fatal To Irish Writer, 58; Book Caused Furor

By the Associated Press

Zurich, Switzerland (Monday), Jan. 13.—James Joyce, Irish author whose "Ulysses" was the center of one of the most bitter literary controversies of modern times, died in a Zurich hospital early today despite the efforts of doctors to save him by blood transfusions.

Joyce underwent an intestinal operation Saturday afternoon. For a time he appeared to be recovering. Only yestreday his son reported him cheerful and apparently out of danger. But during the afternoon the writer suffered a sudden relapse and sank rapidly. His wife and son were at the hospital when he died.

Joyce was born in Dublin, February 2, 1882, into a family of some consequence but poor economic circumstances, and before he was 20 poverty was upon them.

The family's social deterioration and some of the bitterness Joyce felt at its downward steps were set forth in his first novel, "A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man," which appeared in 1916.

This novel revealed the beginnings of that experimentation in words and technique which were to attain fruition in "Ulysses," and slop over, as most critics felt, in the choatic passages of "Finnegans Wake," his last work.

Joyce, as befit the son of an Irish gentleman who was also a Roman Catholic, attended Clongowes Wood College and Belvedere College, Dublin, both Jesuit institutions, and took his degree at Trinity College.

Flair for Literature

He had a faint smattering of medicine which served him well in "Ulysses," but his interests were essentially literary.

Already in those days he had become prominent and the seeds of the Joyce legend had been sown. He had written, "The Day of the Rabblement," an essay critical of Ireland's national literary aspirations and had scorned the Gaelic renaissance movement of Yeats, Lady Gregory, Edward Martyn and George Moore.

In spiritual rebellion against the economic decay and incomplete culture of Ireland, disillusioned in faith, and determined to treasure his artistic integrity on the continent of Europe, he left Dublin in 1904 at the age of 22 to escape from the fog of Anglo-Saxon civilization. "Exile and Cunning" were to be his weapons against what he felt were the prejudices of his homeland.

He returned later to open a motion picture theater and he had grandiose ideas for a daily newspaper of vast circulation and influence.

Europe Beckoned

But Europe and its traditions still beckoned. He lived in Trieste, then part of the old Austrian-Hungarian empire. The World War forced him to leave Trieste, since he was a British subject, and he took up his residence in Zurich, Switzerland, where in 1914 he began work on "Ulysses" which required seven years to write. During these years he supported himself by teaching in the Berlitz School of Languages, and also received financial grants from friends.

In 1907 he had published "Chamber Music," a book of poems many of which have been set to music. In 1914 "Dubliners," a book of 15 short stories appeared. Two years later "A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man" came out, in 1918 he published "Exiles," a play, and in 1921 "Ulysses," parts of which had already been published serially in the "Little Review," a New York magazine of the arts.

"Ulysses," the record of the complete man of literature, carried forward the spiritual and artistic development of Stephen Daedalus who, to all intents, was Joyce himself.

The book was immediately banned in London, Dublin and New York—it had been published in Paris—and became the most controversial novel of modern times. It became also one of the most influential books of our day, exerting an enormous influence, chiefly for the worse, on the literary style and thought of hundreds of young men.

Joyce himself distrusted enthusiasms, but "Ulysses" made him the fountain head of a cult which contributed little if anything to the world's letters and became chiefly known for incomprehensibility.

On December 6, 1933, Federal Judge John M. Woolsey lifted the ban on the publication in this country, observing that although "Ulysses" was unusually frank he could not "detect anywhere the leer of the sensualist" and must hold, therefore, "that it is not pornographic."

The partial blindness from which Joyce suffered many years, required numerous operations. He wrote in long hand, sometimes in agonizing pain.

Past and present Christian Endeavorers of Columbia Heights Christian Church last night joined in eulogizing the Rev. E. B. Bagby, first pastor of the congregation and an active youth leader.

Members of the Bagby Endeavor Society heard their pastor lauded by charter members of the church, including Roy Harlow, who spoke of Mr. Bagby's relationship to the church; Mrs. J. # Neely Assumes Office Before Inauguration

Takes Governorship Of W.Va. When Senate Term Ends at Midnight

By the Associated Press

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 12.—Gov.-elect M. M. Neely indicated today he will take the office as the State's chief executive by midnight tonight without waiting for formal inauguration ceremonies scheduled for noon tomorrow.

The veteran Senator, whose right to name his own successor has been challenged by retiring Gov. Holt, said he expects to become Governor of West Virginia "the very instant" that he ceases to be a United States Senator.

He did not comment on his plans further.

His resignation as United States Senator, submitted Saturday to Gov. Holt, specified that it should become effective "at precisely 12 o'clock midnight" tonight.

Gov. Holt already had chosen Clarence E. Martin, of Martinsburg, former president of the American Bar Association, as his preference for Neely's successor in the Senate.

Senator Neely has insisted that he alone has the right to name his successor.

The complications of two appointments for the one vacant seat undoubtedly will be settled by the United States Senate itself when the issue is raised in Washington.

Neely's choice is expected to be Joseph Rosier, president of Fairmont State Teachers College, a resident of the new Governor's home town and a long personal friend.

The two appointments, made almost in the very hour that one Democratic administration retires in favor of another one, resulted from a political feud between Holt and Neely.

Even if the incoming Governor takes his oath at midnight, it was not expected to disrupt the elaborate ceremonies arranged for the veteran legislator who stepped from the Senate to become executive of his home State.

Neely was expected to announce the name of his senatorial appointee at the moment he speaks the words which make him Governor.

Farmers to Get Cloth for Not Raising Cotton

The Agriculture Department offered cotton growers $25,000,000 worth of cotton goods free yesterday of they would reduce 1941 plantings sufficiently to cut 1,000,000 bales off the Government's previously announced production goal of 12,000,000 bales.

The offering was made, Secretary Wickard said, because the war had virtually closed export markets and action was needed to prevent further accumulation of surpluses under Government loans. Loan stocks now total about 12,000,000 bales.

Under the offer, each cotton farmer agreeing to a further reduction in his acreage would receive Government stamps which could be used for purchase of cotton goods at regular stores. The stamps would be redeemmed by the Agriculture Department.

Farmers would receive stamps at the rate of 10 cents for each pound of cotton they normally would have prdouced on the unplanted portion of their acreage allotment. The maximum amount of stamps would be $25 for sharecroppers and tenants and $50 for owner-operators of more than one farm or of a farm operated by more than one tenant. Stamps would be divided among owners and tenants on the same basis they divide the crop.

For example, a farmer with a 10-acre allotment would receive $25 worth of stamps if he planted only 9 acres, assuming that his normal yield was 250 pounds per acre.

Wickard emphasized that the offer supplemented other phases of the cotton control program under which farmers receive soil conservation and parity payments for planting within their acreage allotments.

He said reductions made under the stamp plan would not affect a grower's acreage allotments in 1942 or subsequent years.

Wickard said this program would be accompanied by an "intensive campaign" to encourage improved living standards among low-income cotton farmers through production of more garden, food and feed crops.

The cotton stamp program, the Secretary said, should contribute "materially" to reemployment of labor in cotton mills, garment factories, wholesale and retail stores and transportation systems.

A Crucial Setting

By Roger W. Babson

Will Congress Play Proper Role?

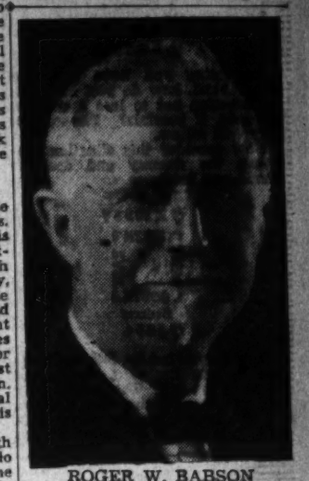
The Seventy-seventh Congress has settled into harness. They have in this current session the toughest job to face in many years. Many unsolved problems have been held over from the old Congress. And our legislators in Washington face many new ones. Things are moving fast. Straightforward thinking and no monkey business is the order of the day. A great responsibility for the course of action our country will take rests upon the shoulders of the law makers we voted into office last November 6. If Congress measures up to our expectations, our affairs are in good hands. If the members succumb to pressure groups and lack the courage of independence, we will find ourselves in a bad way.



ROGER W. BABSON

Neutrality or war have set the stage for our current Congress. Whether we or they like it, this is the dominating scene. "Aid to Britain—short of war" is the topic which blankets the question of neutrality, repeal or circumvention of the Johnson Act. Congress wants and deserves facts from the President and Secretary Hull before it makes binding commitments one way or another. Congress must know just how desperate is England's situation. Congress must know the financial resources of Great Britain in this country and other countries.

Investigating committees of both the Senate and the House can do much to bring into the open the truth regarding the position in which our country finds itself today. With honest, though small and influential groups of men and women already vigorously championing both sides of the war or neutrality question, the average man and woman is entitled to at least a simple explanation or interpretation of the grave problems which today face our nation.

Collectively, Congress is a most sensitive body. Its feelings are easily hurt and it is easily swayed by outside influences. I have always thought that, left to itself, any session of Congress would handle the affairs of this country in a truly great fashion. This would mean, however, that Congress would have to be handled like a jury. Left alone to hear the evidence and to discuss the facts, they would do a swell job. Cut Congress off from mail, telegrams, telephones, the radio and the lobbies and you would have an honest, efficient and considerate governing body.

The average Congressman has today a terrible inferiority complex. Individually and collectively they say, "What's the use?" It will be a miracle—and I still believe in miracles—if this Seventy-seventh Congress does not go down into history as a defeatist group of the worst kind. With few exceptions, Congressmen have little money of their own. While they talk optimistically in public about "Saving democracy," they believe, confidentially, that capitalism is all done for this generation.

After all Congress reflects, to a very large extent, the concern of its constituents, the fears of the voters who put them into office. The same questions regarding the size of our national debt, national income and inflation scare them as much as they do the average man in the street. For years I have been advocating proper pensions for Congressmen. As the representatives of the wealthiest people in the world, they ought, after certain years of service, to be paid a sufficient sum of money to enable them to live comfortably in event of defeat at their next election and to enable them to speak and to vote with the courage that financial independence gives.

But would our people vote such an arrangement? I am afraid not. Hence, if Congress itself becomes frightened, we shall have only ourselves to blame. I believe that most Congressmen secretly feel that we might as well distribute our money over here now as to have it become valueless later. Thus, as you read of huge new appropriations, consider carefully if they are to be used with the idea in mind of saving England. It is conceivable that Congress may interpret their acts during the current session as a final means of getting more houses, automobiles and refrigerators for their own constituents.

If the 1941 Congress turns out a defeatist group, we shall be in a tough spot. I say this regardless of my recent optimistic forecast for the current year. Congress is very apt to neither repeal present bad legislation (and there is plenty of it) nor to enact needed good regulations. Congress is more likely now to think of the immediate needs of the voters "back home" than it is of their children and grandchildren. I fear no more New Deal legislation in 1941, but I do fear wasteful appropriations made for selfish political purposes under the false guise of defense.

Do not let Congress "sell out" democracy and all the good in it for a mere mess of pottage. Individually I have faith in our Congressmen, but, collectively, I am fearful of their lack of courage and faith. We, however, have elected this Seventy-seventh Congress and we must back it up. But it would do no harm and might do some good if each of us wrote our representatives in Washington, expressed our faith and asked for a show of courage and farsightedness in these perplexing and serious times.

Contract Bridge

Here are two finessing situations frequently met in play; how would you handle them? On the first, between dummy and declarer hands, you hold:

Dummy
♠ J 8 6 4 3
SOUTH
Declarer
♠ A Q 7 9 7 5

Presuming you have entry to either hand, how do you play this combination not to lose a trick in the suit, if possible? The correct play will follow.

Now consider this situation: between the dummy and declarer hands, you hold:

Dummy
♡ K 10 9 8 7
SOUTH
Declarer
♡ J 6 5 4

How do you handle this combination to win the most number of tricks in the suit? The correct play will follow, with the other answer.

1. When holding ten cards of a suit, it is correct to finesse for the king; but when leading to the finesse, play the jack from the dummy and not a low card.

If the opponents' cards are divided 2—1, you will win or lose a trick according to the location of the king. If the adverse cards are all in the East hand, the king will be forced to cover the jack; West will show out, and there will remain an established tenace over the guarded ten. If all three cards are held by West, East will show out, and West's king will be allowed to win the trick; then the ace and queen will clear the suit.

2. Following the principle of finessing, you must lead from your own hand first, as it is the weaker hand. If West plays low, you must decide whether to attempt a finesse against the queen, or to capture the queen.

The adversaries hold only two heart honors. If West holds the queen-three and East the ace-deuce, your best play is the seven from dummy. But if West holds the ace-deuce and East the queen-three, the king is the better play because it will hold the trick and the queen will fall automatically on West's ace the next round. The play is a sheer guess, though information disclosed during the bidding or previous play may often eliminate the guess.

Generally speaking, when you hold nine cards, it is better to play the king from dummy; but when you hold eight or less, the queen should be finessed against when West plays low.

with Glynn

Frazier Hunt, who begins a new news program over WJSV at 6:15 p. m. today, to be heard every Monday, Wednesday and Friday at the same time, has been in the news business for a mere 33 years.

It began in Chicago back in 1908 and outside of a romantic-sounding interlude of two and a half years shortly after that, when he was a sugar cane planter in southern Mexico, he's been at it ever since.

He was a country editor in Alexis, Ill., from 1913 to 1916. That, you remember, was a period characterized by another war in Europe, and like any other good newspaperman Mr. Hunt wanted to find out what it was like at first hand, which he couldn't very well do in Alexis, nice as it was.

So Mr. Hunt came to New York and got a job on The Sun. He did so well at reporting activities in our Army camps after our own draft got under way—creating a popular draft soldier character called Yaphank Bennie—that when the United States went to war he promptly got a job as war correspondent. He reported for the American Red Cross and later for the Chicago Tribune, covering the front in France and subsequently the U. S. naval operations in French waters.

After that he was in the North Russian campaign and in the spring of 1919 sprung something of a journalistic coup by getting one of the first interviews with Lenin and other important Bolshevik leaders.

The Post Radio Time Table

12:45 p. m., WOL—"The Cream in the Well" opens tomorrow evening at the National after a dress rehearsal tonight. Before the players get too involved, Walter Compton promises to do a footlight vignette of Martha Sleeper and Producer Martin Gabel (once radio's "The Shadow.").

6:15, WJSV—Frazier Hunt, journalist for three decades, takes to the airlanes in a news program to be heard Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Novel idea of the quarter-hour is the injection of local news by a WJSV announcer.

8, WRC—Francia White and James Melton sing a duet from Strauss' "Die Fledermaus." Her evening's solo is Albeniz's Tango in D, his the "Vesti la Giubba" from "Pagliacci."

8:30, WRC—Alfred Wallenstein conducts the Overture to Rossini's "Barber of Seville," Delibes' "Pizzicato Polka" and Straus' "Morning Journals" waltz.

9, WJSV—Ronald Colman, Otto Kruger and Frances Robinson play a courtroom drama, "Libel," for C. B. DeMille.

9:35, WMAL—Second in celebrity only to Alec Templeton, Art Tatum, the blind pianist, sets a mad pace for those vertiginous virtuosos of the Chamber Music Society of Lower Basin Street.

10, WOL—Raymond Gram Swing returns from his three weeks' vacation, during which Hendrik Willem Van Loon has subbed for his old friend.

With Mary Harris

LOTUS' THIRTEENTH ANNIVERSARY WEEK will begin on Wednesday, be celebrated resoundingly with entertainment "surprises" and bonuses which Maestro Bill Strickland is slyly keeping up his sleeve.

In stepping into its thirteenth year Lotus sets a record for long, prosperous and popular life among our town's night spots. It introduced to Washington the practice of presenting lavish floor shows three times a day, a usage which gives Lotus luncheons the same diversion value as the dinner and supper dance sessions. Manager Dick Lam has been with the Lotus since its opening in 1927 with the exception of four years he took out to complete his electrical engineering course at New York University. In 1932 he returned to Lotus, shortly took over the helm. Ever since then he has demonstrated both sagacity and showmanship in keeping Lotus in the front rank of successful spots. Congratulations to both Manager Lam and Lotus! May they both be around for three times thirteen more years!

Important P. S.: Lotus' new show starting today will star the Three Marlin Sisters, described as "Youth In Action," and dancers Le Blanc and Franklin, just back from a South American tour. The Tom Ball Girls will step in a jazzed-up version of the Highland fling.

Paul Young will reopen his Romany Room on Wednesday, February 5, with Al Spieldock and his orchestra again on the bandstand, and that little prince of funsters, Alan Gale, probably back as emcee. This comes under the head of best news of the month. Paul, who made the Romany music and shows the talk of the town last fall, will certainly duplicate the feat.

CARMEN PUTS ROPES UP. Carmen Cavallaro's opening at the Cosmos Room last Friday made it necessary to put up the velvet rope for the first time since the spot was opened last fall. The kerridge trade came in regiments to hear the gifted Latin pianist and his band, but a lot of them had to resign themselves to standing in the door and listening or coming back another night. So magical is Cavallaro's piano-ing that dancers periodically coagulated in crowds around the bandstand to watch his trickery on the ivories. The late crowd included not only social registerites but quantities of hotel and restaurant operators, musicians and maestros.

SEPIA INSPIRATION. It's popular knowledge that he hectic rhythms known variously as swing, jazz and jive derive from the folk music of the colored race. But in the Lounge Riviera the other eve Pablo Santans, Puerto Rican member of the Pan American Union staff, told us that the samba, conga and rumba music now riding so high is based on the primitive lyrics of Pan-American sepias.

NEW ASCAP ANGLE. Carr and Don, Madrillon's maestros, have a new grievance against ASCAP. They don't give a whoop about

AL BOTTORFF, the Neptune Room's new drummer-marimbaphonist

ASCAP's radio controversies, but they are very hurt and sorry about the mere trickle of new numbers now coming out as a result of the battling, point out that night spots need a constant flood of new music. . . . Madrillon's bandstand has just been done over in sunrise hued silks of canary and gold.

The goldfish in the Mayflower Lounge pool swim near to Dick Koons' band when it plays rumbas, dash back to the other end when "Ha-Cha" Gardner turns loose a jive song. We didn't believe it either until we saw it.

SILVER FOX-ING. Helen Malcolm sings a nice sweety-pie song, but you should hear her in "The Duchess Threw Her Crutches Away." She's an embryo Bee Lillie. For more fun ask Peggy Wood to sing "Redopu." They're a sugar-and-spice pair, this Helen and Peggy . . . Chevy Chase folks are beginning fully to appreciate the Silver Fox, its sophisticated devirsion and luxury cuisine. A fine place to spend long evenings that seem short.

EDDY MINSETTI, star funny man, joins the Casino Royal's Sharon Lynn Revue today. Those Brazilian sleekies, De Mar and Denise, are held over and the Sharon Lynnettes are due to blossom in a flock of new parade and swing-o numbers.

BULLETIN BOARD. La Comtesse Victoria de Andreio sang "Ciribiribin," verra beautifully in Ciro's Spanish Village the other eve. Just as a gracious tribute to her friends, "Mayor" and "Mayoress" Ciro . . . Don Martinio's band, now at Del Rio, was the one you heard in "Down Argentine Way" . . . Judge George Neilson thoroughly understands the intricate working of the Rainbow Room novachord, often explains it to parties of friends . . . Part-owner and chef Andy Miller, of Restaurant 823 Fifteenth Street, is the popsy of a lovely new girl infant . . . Today is the fifteenth birthday party of Anna Therese, daughter of proprietor Dick Ashby, of Dick's Grill. She's only 15 months old, but she has a birthday party every month . . . Can you do the square dance? Or even a round dance? Then you'd better go over to Kavakos' Grill tomorrow eve. Those Cowboy Ramblers will be shaking up country dances.

The Shoreham is very proud to have booked Hester Beall Provenson, speech teacher at Maryland University, as commentator for their new series of fashion luncheons, starting Februray 1.

PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT in these melodic instances: That "different" idea of "Madame La Zonga" being tossed about the Metronome Room by Ray Heatherton and Judy Clark . . . "Happy Birthday, Mr. President," masterpiece of the Anchor Room's Matt Windsor. You'll be hearing it more 'n more from now on . . . "Santa Fe Trail" as caroled by the Hi Hat's Carmela Lazari, is another bit of perfectionism . . . Ditto for "Alemandra," one of the most alluring Pan-American tunes of many played by Burrus Williams' band in La Salle Versailles . . . Double ditto for "Smoke Rings," as made into a muted trombone solo by Sammy Ferro, of Paul Kain's Five in Mayfair. It makes the customers' ears wiggle with pleasure.

Neptune Flash! Al Botteroff, new lad with Milt Hearth's Trio in the Neptune Room, plays the biggest marimbaphone made. And in the grand manner . . . When the Herthquakes leave Neptune on February 28 they'll be succeeded by the Dalton Boys, greatly noted on the radio, and the "Two Pianos From Vienna"—Ben and Gertie Hellman, European refugees.

Oakley, Duane Gill, Edwin Mann and Howard Jarvis, deacons; Eric Daenecke, church school superintendent; Duane Gill, assistant; Howard Salzman, secretary, and Edwin Mann, treasurer.

Norseman Reveals Nazi Raider Sank Missing Freighter

San Francisco, Jan. 12 (INS).—Fate of the missing Norwegian freighter Teddy, long overdue and listed for weeks as "unheard from," was finally learned in San Francisco today.

A prowling Nazi raider in the Indian Ocean overtook the Teddy last November 8, held its crew prisoner for three weeks after sinking the Norwegian ship with a time bomb, then put them ashore at a Japanese port, giving them their freedom.

This story was told by Tor Gjesdal, attache of the Norwegian Legation at Washington, D. C., who talked with the captain of the sunken ship at the San Francisco office of the Norwegian Consul Gen. S. Steckmest.

The Norse skipper slipped into San Francisco last Friday as a passenger aboard the Japanese liner Nitta Maru. (The captain's name is withheld by request; his family is living in Nazi-occupied Norway.)

2 Envoys Honored By Medical Group

The Washington Chapter of the Pan-American Medical Association elected Dr. Carlos Brin, newly appointed Ambassador from Panama, and Capt. Colon Alfaro, Ambassador from Eucador, as honorary presidents last night at a meeting at the Army and Navy Club.

The association also heard talks by George Boncesco, former financial counselor of the Rumanian Legation, and Leo Pasvolsky, of the State Department.

Dr. James Alexander Lyon, president, presided.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall. Program: Symphony No. 7 in A major (Beethoven), "Afforderung zum Tanz" (Weber), Wedding March from "Le Nozze di Figaro" (Mozart), Ballet and Entr'acte Music from "Rosamunde" (Schubert), Polka from "The Golden Age" (Shostakovich), "An der schoenen, blauen Donau" (Strauss).

For the penultimate concert in the "Beloved Masterpieces" series, performed yesterday afternoon in Constitution Hall, Hans Kindler chose Beethoven's seventh symphony as the core of the program expertly played by the National Symphony Orchestra. Doubtless having in mind Wagner's characterization of the A major symphony as "the apotheosis of the dance," he subtitled the day's offerings as "A Program of the Dance," and devoted the latter half of the concert to a half dozen compositions in which rhythmic movement predominated over over elements. An interested and cordial audience enjoyed every moment of the proceedings, and expended much enthusiasm in applause.

BROWN

The Beethoven reading was admirable in all the orchestral virtues. It was eloquent, beautifully phrased and colored, and brilliant in execution. It was the kind of reading that one can follow with implicit trust in the divination of the leader and in the faithful adherence of the players. The proficiency of the National Symphony Orchestra this season is a profound satisfaction for all the patrons who during the decade of its growth have maintained faith in its viability. It has definitely attained an artistic stature that makes it worthy of the first rank.

The habit of reading a program into absolute music and inventing descriptive names for compositions that require none seems to be ineradicable in human nature. Since Wagner's phrase has been quite generally adopted these days as a convenient label for the seventh symphony, it is interesting to search for other and earlier attempts to express the ineffable in words. Four of these endeavors have been selected from many to be found in reference books.

Adolf Bernard Marx, who was 32 when Beethoven died, believed that the symphony represented some warlike people of the south, such as the Moors in Spain. Alexander Ublibichev, a contemporary of Marx, declared that the scherzo was "a masquerade which enters into the program of the festival that forms the general poetic basis of the symphony," and that the finale "pictured the departure of the guests intoxicated with joy and wine." Wilhelm von Lenz considered the entire work pastoral in spirit. The sounds of the oboe and clarinet in the first movement transported him into a meadow "ere the sun has dispersed the mists of dawn;" the allegretto suggested "memories of the entrance into church of a couple upon whom fate has laid its bonds;" the finale "the overflowing joy of life." Karl Friedrich Nohl thought that the symphony was a musical painting of a knightly festival.

After the intermission Dr. Kindler gave his audience relaxing entertainment with sundry gay and lively pieces. Felix Weingartner's rich orchestration of Weber's "Invitation to the Dance" was followed by the wedding march from Mozart's "Le Nozze di Figaro," the ever-lovely incidental music composed by Shubert for Chezy's "Rosamunde, Fuerstin von Chypren," the satirical polka from Shostakovich's "The Golden Age" and the Johann Strauss "Blue Danube" waltz.

The audience tried to obtain a repetition of the polka by applauding at some length, but did not succeed. As a compensation for his refusal, Dr. Kindler added "Siboney" as an extra number.

More persons used the facilities of the center last year than ever before, Rosenblum pointed out. Attendance figures for the forums, institutes, the various classes and organizations totaled 325,000 for 1940.

Area Churches Preparing For Mission

Spiritually preparing for the coming National Christian Mission, several Protestant congregations in Washington and Maryland yesterday held special services.

Meanwhile, they look forward to this week's preparatory mission rallies, the first of which will take place tonight at 8 o'clock at Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, Fourth and B Streets Southeast, with Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, and Dr. W. L. Darby, local Mission chairman and secretary, respectively speaking.

Dr. Darby, addressing a preparatory "preaching service" yesterday at Memorial Methodist Church, Hyattsville, Md., told a large congregation that the world today needed a spiritual map, light, voice and power to lead it in the right path.

Columbia Heights Christian Church, led by the Rev. Arthur P. Wilson, yesterday initiated an evangelistic drive that will extend throughout the local mission from February 2 to 9, and through Easter Sunday.

'Siege' Hospital For Britain Being Built in U. S.

The unit will make an extensive laboratory and field study of communicable diseases under war conditions, reporting its findings to the United States Army, Navy and Public Health Service.

Dr. John E. Gordon, professor of preventive medicine and epidemiology at Harvard Medical School, will be general director. He is now en route to England, accompanied by Dr. Paul B. Beeson, of Wooster, Ohio, who has been appointed chief physician of the unit.

Missouri Inaugural Off Pending Donnell Vote Probe

Jefferson City, Mo., Jan. 12 (AP).—White ties and evening gowns were put away unsoiled today as Missouri Republicans fumed and fussed over the Missouri gubernatorial fight which caused cancellation of plans to send large delegations to the inauguration of Forrest C. Donnell tomorrow.

Deferment of the inaugural, if there is one for Donnell, as a result of the legislative investigation into the November 5 election, was a shock to all the loyal men who had been appointed honorary colonels on Donnell's staff.

Their bright new blue, red and gold uniforms—purchased for $118.50—will be hanging in closets tomorrow, instead of flashing over the streets of the State Capital.

The General Assembly refused yesterday to certify Donnell as Governor-elect and agreed to hear a contest proceeding brought by a Democratic county chairman.

Under a constitutional provision that a Governor shall serve until his successor is duly elected and qualified, Gov. Lloyd C. Stark will continue in office until the Assembly completes its investigation and decides who won the election last November.

Donnell spent today at his St. Louis home with members of the family and a few close advisers.
